SUMMONED FOR INQUEST

Probe Theory Granddaughter In Noted Steel Family Shot Gun 'For Fun.'

WARREN — (AP)—Investigators found half-filled liquor glasses today in the room where Mrs. Cordelia Campbell, daughter-in-law of a pioneer Ohio steel man, was wounded fatally at a family Christmas gathering.

Coroner J. C. Henshaw and prosecuting authorities examined contents of the room and two bullet holes in its walls preliminary to hearing testimony from Miss Louise Campbell, 28, blond daughter of the victim. Prosecutor Paul J. Reagen said she fired the shots.

Examine Christmas Tree.

Investigators said nothing apparently had been changed in the room. In addition to the glasses, they examined a five-foot Christmas tree which Mrs. Campbell, 55, was trimming just before the shooting.

One of the bullet holes was in a ledge about four feet from the tree, and directly above a partly burned candle. One version of the shooting, Reagen said prior to the inquest, was that Miss Campbell had fired at the candle "in fun" after obtaining a revolver from a pocket in her motor car.

Another bullet had gone through the back of a chair and continued through a glass door into the wall of an adjoining corridor. It was this bullet, Dr. Henshaw said, which evidently struck Mrs. Campbell, whose late husband was a son of James A. Campbell, former head of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company.

Miss Campbell, appearing highly nervous in the women's quarters of the Warren jail, wore a black dress and black shoes for her appearance before the secret inquest this afternoon. One source indicated she might be released to attend her mother's funeral tomorrow.

Several servants, previously questioned by County Detective Joseph Luarde, also were summoned to the inquest.

Luarde said he was "not satisfied" with what he had been able to learn about the shooting. He said Mrs. Campbell apparently was shot when she attempted to take a gun from her daughter after the

SNOW'S LATE

Flurries Hit City Today After Mild Holiday.

The snow that most Mansfielders wanted for Christmas was falling today—not very heavily, but at least it was recognizable as snow.

The weatherman followed the mild holiday week-end with a prediction of rain tonight and tomorrow, with the possibility of snow flurries Tuesday.

The mercury touched a high mark of 41 on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, with the lowest mark of the holiday week-end registered Saturday, when the reading was 24. At noon today the temperature was 36, according to Observer Otto Spranger.

BAKER RITES TO BE TOMORROW

Grave of Wartime Secretary of War to Be Near Those of Rockefeller, Herrick.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Newton D. Baker, wartime secretary of war, will be buried tomorrow in Lakeview cemetery following funeral services in Trinity Episcopal church.

The Wilson cabinet officer, 66, died at his home Christmas day of cerebral thrombosis. His widow and two of his three children, Mrs. John P. McGean and Newton D. Baker, III, were at his bedside. The third child, Mrs. Fulton Wright, was in California.

Active pallbearers will be chosen from among Baker's 10 law partners. There will be no honorary pallbearers.

The former secretary became ill while vacationing at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., last July. He returned to Cleveland and recovered, only to suffer a second attack a week ago.

At the time of his death, Baker was directing from Cleveland the fight of southern utilities companies challenging the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority before a three-judge federal court in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Baker spent more than 20 years in public office.

He was born Dec. 3, 1871, in Martinsburg, W. Va., received his education at Johns Hopkins and Washington and Lee universities, and began practicing here in 1897. He was elected city solicitor in 1903 and mayor in 1911. He was re-elected mayor in 1913.

3 SONS, WIDOW TO SHARE IN BLACK ESTATE

Will of Ohio Brass Founder Filed, Personal Property to Go to Mrs. Black.

Preliminary Estimate Sets Value at $275,000; Family Nominated as Executors.

The entire estate of the late Frank B. Black, founder of the Ohio Brass company and chairman of the firm's board of directors, is left to the widow and three sons under provisions of the will on file today in probate court.

Mr. Black died unexpectedly of a heart attack Sunday, Dec. 19 while riding at his home, Raemelton farm, southwest of the city.

Its value estimated at $275,000 in the application for administration filed by Atty. William McE. Weldon, Mr. Black's brother-in-law, the estate will total "considerably more than that figure," Weldon said today.

Only Partial Valuation.

"The estimate is only in round figures and does not represent the entire valuation of the estate," he added.

The preliminary estimate lists real estate at $25,000 and personal property at $250,000. Real estate holdings in Raemelton estate alone are listed at $250,000 on the county tax books.

The will, drawn up Feb. 1, 1935, provides for the use of Raemelton house by Mr. Black's widow, Mrs. Jessie B. Black, during the remainder of her life, but stipulates that the property "be held and treated as a part of the residue of the estate."

Explains Bequests To Widow.

Bequests including household goods, jewelry, books, silverware, pictures and automobiles belonging to the estate are left to Mrs. Black.

Mrs. Black was limited to personal belongings "not because of lack of love toward her, but solely because she has ample means of her own and has requested me not to make to her any other bequest," the will explains.

The will provides for the equal distribution of all the remainder of the estate, both real and personal, to the three sons, Robert B. Black, Donald S. Black and Roger A. Black.

Records in the county recorder's office show that the Ramelton farm property was transferred last summer by Mr. Black to his three sons.

The widow and three sons are nominated as executors of the estate "with power and authority to sell; convey, transfer, settle and manage all of the property

DEFY GUNFIRE

Insurgents Hold Out In Two Strongholds In Teruel.

HENDAYE, FRANCO - SPANISH FRONTIER—(AP)—Insurgent troops and civilians held out in two flaming citadels today against Spanish government attackers in control of the rest of the ancient Aragon city of Teruel.

Government advices said the massive Teruel seminary and the Bank of Spain, both on fire, still housed a defiant group of Italian officers, German officers and Spanish sympathizers of Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

The attacking forces had tightened their grip on the strategic city 135 miles east of Madrid by successfully storming the civil guard barracks, leaving only the two strongholds to be conquered.

Operation Relieves Woman of Beard, Husky Voice of Male

SAN FRANCISCO—(U.P.)—A 41-year-old woman whose characteristics began to change into those of a male, until she was compelled to shave every day, has been relieved by a rare operation for the removal of a tumor, the University of California hospital reported today.

The woman formerly lived in San Francisco but she moved to a small eastern city after the operation, to escape the embarrassment of being seen by her friends here while she recovered.

Dr. Alice F. Maxwell, of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at the University Medical school, made the report on the case. An arrhenoblastoma, described as a "masculinizing tumor,' was removed in the operation. Until 1931, no similar case in medical history had been reported.

The woman had been married 30 years. She had no children. At the time she entered the hospital for treatment, she had developed such male features as broad shoulders, body hirsutism, deep, husky voice, and a recession of hair at the temples.

Eighteen days after the operation, she left the hospital. Four months later her facial contours had softened strikingly, the hirsutism had diminished, and her voice had lost its masculine tone.

Recently she informed the hospital that she no longer finds it necessary to shave.

The patients name was withheld.

New Jap War Regulations Peril Lives of Americans

Decree Orders Death Penalty for Foreigners In Event of Crimes Against Japanese Military Forces.

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Americans were made subject to the death penalty today for crimes against Japan's armed forces under a Japanese decree establishing rigid law for China's conquered areas.

New regulations for all persons, "including the nationals of third powers," in Japanese-controlled areas apparently raised the question of the treaty rights of other foreign powers in China.

A Japanese spokesman acknowledged that the measures put Americans and other foreigners under Japanese military law.

Jap Boat Attacked.

A tugboat laden with Japanese troops was attacked by an unidentified grenade thrower on Soochow creek a few hours after the rules were promulgated.

The spokesman said the incident probably would "retard the return to normal of the areas north of the creek," specifically mentioned in the new regulations.

A Japanese embassy spokesman said foreign embassies had not been informed of the regulations which would abridge extra-territorial rights.

Authoritative sources said Japan also had requested foreign embassies not to reopen immediately their offices at Nanking, captured Chinese capital.

LAST TRIP?

2 Suspects In Gem Smuggling Ring Aboard Liner.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Diamonds —$13,000,000 worth—beautiful, sparkling icy gems.

For seven years gigantic liners nosed into New York piers carrying the diamonds, hidden in the false bottoms of suitcases.

Today, after two years of tireless sleuthing that led all over Europe, the government moved to cut off the last rivulets of that glittering stream.

A liner moved toward New York today, but this time it carried two men and a woman the government charges were among the last fugitive cogs in an international smuggling ring.

The travelers who will arrive Tuesday on the Berengaria are Nat Lukin, Gussie Firstenberg and Solomon Halper, three of 55 men and women indicted last June, 30 of whom were subsequently convicted.

FIVE FLEE FIRE ON S. DIAMOND

Two Families Driven From Apartments as Blaze Hits Building Sunday Night.

Fire which swept through the Daniel T. Royal grocery, 41 South Diamond street last night routed two families from their homes and did damage estimated at $2,750.

The blaze was discovered at 7:30 p. m. by John C. Gosson who lived in an apartment above the establishment. He summoned his brother, Leonard and his wife, who live in the other apartment and then hurried his own wife and small son to safety.

Firemen of company No. 1, under the direction of Captain Leo T. Saltzgaber, battled the blaze, which was confined to the rear of the building, for nearly two hours. Two lines totaling nearly 700 feet were laid.

Firemen said they believed the blaze to have started from an overheated motor of a refrigeration machine in the basement.

The blaze destroyed fixtures stored in the basement and burned up through the floor causing considerable damage to a large refrigerator at the rear of the building on the first floor.

Royal today estimated the loss of stock from fire and water at "over $1,000." He said the cooling unit which was completely destroyed, was valued at $750.

Damage to the building which is owned by Mrs. Leona Calvert, 181 South Main street, was estimated at another $1,000. Both the building and the stock are fully covered by insurance, Royal said.

Royal said he left the store at 7 p. m.

Describes War Horror In Far East

Correspondent, Returned From Orient, Calls It 'Worst Tragedy.'

(Editor's Note: H. R. Ekins, United Press war correspondent, has just returned to New York after five months in the Orient covering the Chinese-Japanese war.)

By H. R. EKINS
(Copyright by United Press)

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—I flew from New York to Shanghai last July to join the United Press staff covering the Chinese-Japanese hostilities which had started outside Peiping the night of July 7.

I found myself in the midst of the starkest human tragedy that I have experienced in covering wars around one half the world.

I reached Hankow early in August. Known as the "Chicago" of China, it is a sprawling, steaming city on the banks of the great Yangtse river and for centuries the army which controls it has been the strategic master of Cathay.

Shortly after my arrival in Hankow, however, I was taken ill and had to return to Shanghai for medical care.

I got out on the last passenger plane which left the city and reached Shanghai just in time to be at the Palace hotel when it was bombed by Chinese fliers trying to strike at the Japanese.

That was Shanghai's "bloody Saturday."

Three Chinese aerial bombs killed at least 1,600 people—including Americans—in the space of one minute. All these people were civilians. Not one soldier was hit.

Two bombs crashed through the Palace and Cathay hotels on the crowded Shanghai waterfront.

It was as if Times Square in New York or the intersection of State and Madison streets in Chicago were attacked at the hour when thousands of workers were leaving offices to go to their homes for the Saturday afternoon holiday.

Another bomb crashed at the intersection of Avenue Edward VII and Tibet road. That bomb alone killed more than 1,000 people. It tore a crater in the road into which one could put a small-sized railway car.

It mangled hundreds of children, women, and men beyond recognition.

I saw the bodies of people who had been killed simply by concussion. Every bit of clothing had been blown from the bodies.

I went into the countryside. Death struck here with the same effectiveness that it struck in the cities.

Japanese and Chinese planes came over high in the skies, circled, and came down in screaming power dives. The bombs came

TWO-DAY TOLL FOR COUNTRY SETS RECORD

Richland County Has Quiet and Safe Yuletide; Four Suffer Minor Injuries.

ENDS LIFE ON CHRISTMAS

Bucyrus Suicide Lone Violent Death In District; Traffic Kills 300 In Nation.

While 525 violent deaths were reported in the nation over the Christmas holiday, the Richland county area observed a comparatively quiet and safe Yuletide, with only four persons receiving minor injuries in the county.

The national toll, attributed to traffic mishaps, shootings, suicides, and train and airplane accidents, was one of the highest in history. Officials of the National Safety council who had conducted a vigorous drive against holiday accidents, described the death toll as "discouraging."

Wife Witnesses Suicide.

Only one violent death was reported in north central Ohio—that of S. J. Gunn, 36, proprietor of the Weaver bar at Bucyrus, who took his own life Christmas morning by firing a .32 caliber pistol into his heart.

Mrs. Gunn, who witnessed the suicide, said her husband had been despondent over financial reverses.

Funeral services for Mr. Gunn were held today at the Muns funeral home in Bucyrus.

Ohio Fourth In Nation.

Ohio, with 35 deaths, was fourth among the states in the number of fatalities. Illinois had 71 to head the list and Pennsylvania reported 47. In New York state, 36 persons died violent deaths over the holiday.

Chicago alone reported 51 deaths from unnatural causes from midnight Friday to today, with traffic accidents accounting for 15 of them.

More than 300 persons died in Yuletide traffic in the nation despite a widespread safety campaign and an appeal from President Roosevelt for caution on the

Train Hits Car, He Suffers Stiff Neck

NEW LONDON—City solicitor Edward M. Palmer was talking about miracles today. Saturday, while returning home from his farm he drove his car into the path of a fast New York Central westbound passenger train at the Dignon crossing a mile south of here. Palmer woke up in the office of a Greenwich physician where an examination revealed that the extent of his injuries was a stiff neck. The car was completely demolished.

"Flea Policemen" Used To Control Marijuana Traffic

INDIANAPOLIS—(AP)—The use of "flea policemen" to assist law enforcement agencies in controlling the present widespread sale and use of marijuana, a habit-forming narcotic, was reported today before the opening meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The insect is an almost microscopic and transparent water flea called daphnia. It responds immediately to small amounts of marijuana placed in the water in which it lives, according to Dr. Arno Viehoever of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science, who developed the test.

Marijuana has come into extensive use in the United States in recent years. Users of it become temporarily insane and law enforcement authorities say many violent crimes have been committed as the result of use of it.

Heretofore there has never been any satisfactory method of quick identification of the narcotic. Now, however, with the flea policemen, it is possible to identify the narcotic either in cigarets or the weed itself within a few minutes and make convictions easier to obtain.

Council Tradition Smashed, Troll Ignores New Year Meet

A tradition of years standing was unceremoniously dumped overboard today by Council President-Elect Karl P. Troll.

Troll announced today that the organization meeting of the incoming council would be held next Tuesday night, just before the new group of solons holds its first meeting. Committees will be named by Troll at that time, and he will outline his ideas on procedure.

Thus for the first time in 50 years—so says Council Clerk William J. Beer—there will be no council organization meeting on New Year day, when such sessions have usually been held.

In addition to upsetting that particular tradition, Troll indicated that there might be some other changes—such as shorter meetings. He takes the stand that if council members go over legislation before the regular meetings, there wouldn't be so much need for discussion from the floor, indicating that the caucus plan, missing for the past two years, might be revived.

Commenting on upsetting of the New Year day meeting tradition, Troll said he had originally intended to have the organization meeting on Monday night, but since the regular meeting comes on Tuesday, thought "we might as well kill two birds with one stone."

It'll be a snappy session, too, Troll promises.

"It will only take about 10 minutes to announce the committees and say what I have to say," he asserted. Any word on committee selections? Not yet, "I haven't made up my mind on all of them," he answered.

Breres Attempts to Book Game For Yuncker Club With Ohio Staters.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

JIMMY BRERES, who manages the crack Yuncker Sports, is dickering with a Columbus party for a basketball? game with a group of Ohio State grid stars, including Ralph Wolfe, Dick Nardi and others. . . . Willard's Kenny Heisler is the first Capital athlete ever to receive professional football offers. He has been offered contracts by the Chicago Bears and Brooklyn Dodgers. . . . Inventors have tackled the problem of the fumble in football. The U. S. patent office includes a dynamically balanced football, an anti-skid sheath to be slipped over the pigskin, a ball with roughened ends for forward passing and a ball with a finger hole like a bowling ball. . . . Rogers Hornsby wil take a pilot post in the minor league—but none has been offered. . . . Joe Medwick in not involved in that deal that is supposed to be cooking between the Giants and Cardinals.

HARRY MEHRE, who recently quit Georgia (or was he canned?), is rated as having a good chance to get the Michigan job. . . . The announcement of the new Wolverine coach is not expected to be made until Fielding Yost is retired as athletic director in January. . . . Alabama was alloted 5,000 tickets for the Rose Bowl game, and 20,000 of the Tide's followers want 'em. . . . Here's one for the book: Ted Husing is not allowed to broadcast world series games, but he is the commentator for the new American league baseball film. . . . Huber McCuen of Mansfield is a member of the freshman cage squad at Ashland college. So are Glen Hartman and Leonard Carlisle of Shelby. . . . Tulane meets four of the teams playing in bowl games on the grid next fall. . . . If Tommy Farr beats Jim Braddock, the Englishman will be signed with Max Baer.

NOT a single member of the Alabama Rose Bowl team tips the scale at 200 pounds. It is the lightest team ever to play on the coast . . . Jimmy Foxx is on the market, but no offers have been forthcoming. . . . Although betted known for his football, basketball and track performances, Dick Olin, Mansfield, is also a swimmer, and is a free styler on the Kenyon college tank team . . . Unless the board changes its attitude toward night outdoor athletics, Mansfield may not be able to compete in next spring's district track carnival at Fremont, which is planning to stage the event under bulbs. Or does the edict against night sports include track? . . . Jim McDonald is the first man ever to captain both the Ohio State football and basketball team in the same school term . . . The Syracuse All-Opponent team includes Kelker, Western Reserve end.

ALL this talk about night baseball in the Ohio State league next summer is not the bunk. Findlay is ready to award contracts for equipment . . . Just four years ago Rudy York, who hits 'em for Detroit, was a garage mechanic in a little Georgia town . . . Mickey Cochrane is the highest paid manager in the major leagues . . . The story that "Gibby" Groscost beat one of the leading pinsters in the city the other night is true, and he didn't need a handicap to do it, either.

Prepare For Erie

Tygers to Meet Pennsylvania Quintet on Home Court Wednesday.

THIS is a holiday week for all of the Mansfield high school students except the basketball players.

Of course, the cagers have no classes to attend, but there are morning basketball sessions. They turned out today for a drill, and another will be held tomorrow.

Here Wednesday.

The drills this week are in preparation for the invasion of the Erie, Pa., East quintet, which is now on a holiday barnstorming tour, Wednesday night.

Coach Russ Murphy knows nothing at all about the invaders except that they are undefeated. "They wouldn't be making this trip if they didn't have a strong club," Murphy said.

Unable to set up a definite style of play because he knows nothing at all about the Erie, Pa., club, Murphy sent the Tygers through a routine drill today.

He attempted to remedy some of the mistakes committed in the Canton McKinley tilt, and put the Tygers through long shooting drills.

The Tygers have handled the ball well in all of their games, but their failure to score with any degree of regularity has proven costly.

For instance, in the Canton game, the Tygers drove into the basket time and again, but were unable to find the basket more than six times.

One of the few bright spots in the Canton game was the play of the guards, John Hallabrin and Jack Lyons, who accounted for all of the Mansfield baskets.

No Changes Planned.

Although still experimenting with the lineup, Murphy does not expect to make any changes for the Erie game. However, he indicated that Jack Dugger will probably see more service Wednesday than he has in any of the recent games.

The Mansfield-Erie game is one of the few cage attractions billed in the vicinity this week. No games are billed in the N. C. O., County and Twin-Valley leagues until next week.

Non-league games will find Ashland entertaining Wooster Saturday and Bucyrus will be host to Tiffin Junior Order Thursday.

Minnesota Cage Coach Knows His Fouls.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Dave MacMillan, Minnesota's basketball coach and an old-time pro star, evidently knows all about playing a rough game.

He was watching a strenuous contest between the Jewels and his old team, the Celtics, in the American pro league last night. One player was sent tumbling and immediately called for the referee's attention.

"That's no foul," commented MacMillan. "His shoulders didn't touch the floor."

THE SWATTING YANKEES MARCH AWAY

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK—(AP)—It was Yankee murder in all degrees again in the baseball wars of 1937.

From start to finish, the Yanks were in a league by themselves. Paced by a more dangerous Joe DiMaggio, the still larruping Lou Gehrig, who ran his amazing iron-man streak well over the 1,900-consecutive-game mark, and Belting Bill Dickey, the '37 edition of Murderers' Row stamped itself definitely among the great clubs of all time.

THE YANKS CELEBRATE

In this locker room scene, and they had a lot to celebrate all year. Lefty Gomez, holding baseball, has just clinched the World Series for the Yanks. Pitcher Johnny Murphy pats his shoulder. Next to Gomez is Coach John Schulte. Right is Joe DiMaggio, Yankee sparkplug.

Their deadly attack was backed by classier pitching, particularly by a vastly improved Lefty Gomez and big Rufus The Red Ruffing, who won 20 games after ending the seasons most persistent hold-out in May. On May 24, they marched into first place in the American league to stay, and then went on to flail the ears off their neighborhood rivals, the New York Giants, in five games of New York's repeat World Series monopoly.

As usual, the National league had the pennant race, although the pre-season favorites, the St. Louis Cardinals, crumpled in mid-season, and Dizzy Dean was sidelined for keeps with a combination of temperament, sore toe and ailing arm.

Squeezing through in the last week, the Giants were paced again by the extraordinary hurling ability of King Carl Hubbell, who won 22 games, although his all-time 2-year record of 24 straight victories had been broken by the Dodgers on May 31. He was supported by Cliff Melton, stringbean southpaw rookie, who became the first freshman flinger to win 20 games since Wes Ferrell.

Melton did not hold the distinction alone, however, for before the season ended, he was joined in the select set of "double ten" winners by the Boston Bees' sensational "old men," Jim Turner and Lou Fette. These three pitchers, along with Detroit's Roundhouse Rudy York, who cracked a Babe Ruth record by walloping 18 homers in one month, rated tops among the year's rookies. Cleveland's John Allen won 15 games, lost 1.

Individually, nothing came within shouting distance of Ducky Medwick's sweep of batting laurels, which won for him the most valuable player award in the National league. The American league award went to Detroit's Charley Gehringer in a close fight with DiMaggio. Gehringer won the league batting title.

Disappointments were many. Chief of these were Dizzy Dean, who did virtually no pitching after the all-star game in July; Van Mungo of the Dodgers, who finally was suspended without pay, and Schoolboy Rowe of the Tigers, who saw little action because of an ailing arm. Bob Feller, strike-out sensation for Cleveland in the closing weeks of '36, showed lots of promise, but did not live up to expectations.

RING CONCEDES AMBERS' CROWN TO FEATHER KING

Magazine Predicts Triumph for Henry Armstrong In Announcing 1937 Ratings.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—There's an argument brewing in fistic circles that promises to wax hotter and hotter until the night next summer when Lou Ambers climbs through the ropes to defend his lightweight championship against the "wonder fighter," dusky Henry Armstrong of Los Angeles, the featherweight king.

The Ring magazine, announcing the results of its poll of the world's boxing writers on the top fighting men for 1937, has added fuel to the debate by conceding Ambers' crown to Armstrong without a blow having been struck. Ambers' following, which is a large one, isn't going to like that.

Unanimous Choice.

So struck were the 393 participating fight experts by Armstrong's record of 27 straight victories—26 by knockouts—that they not only nominated him top featherweight without a dissenting vote but went right on to name him the best lightweight by a sizable majority over Ambers. Also, they voted him, pound for pound, the best scrapper in the business.

Automatically, the projected meeting of Armstrong and Ambers becomes the second most attractive battle on the 1937 schedule, out-ranked only by the Schmeling-Louis tussle. It's so big that Promoter Mike Jacobs won't attempt to bring them together indoors.

The Ring's poll offers no other surprises to speak of, Ambers being the only champion not listed at the top of his division. Joe Louis' strong comeback, including his knockout of Champion Jim Braddock and his win over Tommy Farr, enabled him to poll 354 votes to 41 for Max Schmeling.

Farr, who is here again training for a bout with Braddock on Jan. 21, was ranked third, followed by Nathan Mann, Alberto Lovell, Tony Galento, Jimmy Braddock, Jimmy Adamick, Maxie Rosenbloom, Roscoe Toles, Arturo Godoy, Bob Pastor and Max Baer. The ranking of the first seven agrees with that of the National Boxing association except that Galento was rated fourth by the N. B. A.

Lewis Ranked No. 1.

First and second rankings in the other divisions were: light-heavyweight: John Henry Lewis and Al Gainer; middleweight, Freddie Steele and Fred Apostoli; welterweight, Barney Ross and Ceferino Garcia; lightweight, Henry Armstrong and Lou Ambers; featherweight, Henry Armstrong and Petey Sarron; bantamweight, Harry Jeffra and Sixto Escobar; flyweight, Benny Lynch (Scotland) and Peter Kane (England).

Doug Miller's Oldsmobiles lost ground in their bid for first place in the Northern Ohio Traveling league Sunday when they dropped two games to the pace setting Fremont Hills on the Fremont lanes.

WRESTLERS SWING KNUCKLES TONIGHT

Two of the wildest lightheavyweight grapplers in captivity will "go native" so to speak tonight in the Armory ring when they forget all about wrestling and settle their athletic differences with their fists.

They are Bob Blake of Columbus and Sterling Davis, Texas "Silver Streak," and they're to fight 10 rounds with the padded mitts, the outgrowth of a wrestling match which wound up in a fight here last Monday night with both men swinging fists to the utter disregard of all wrestling rules.

So hard did they fight when they were supposed to wrestle that Promoter Tim Nolan signed them to fight over the 10-round route and their bout will headline tonight's show in the Armory ring.

The wrestling feature of the card will pit Frankie Hart of Holland, little fellow who introduced the "Windmill" hold to American wrestling circles, against Walter Stratton of Leetonia, O.

Opening the show at 8:30, Joe Magyar, well-built Hungarian lightheavyweight who made a good impression in his first start here, is to meet Jose Rodriquez, wild, rugged Mexican. The match is scheduled for one fall with a 20-minute time limit.

SEABISCUIT TO START

Jockey's Suspension to End Day Before Santa Anita Race.

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Seabiscuit, Charles S. Howard's moneywinner, will be a starter in Saturday's New Year stakes at Santa Anita, Trainer Tom Smith announced today. Jockey Jack Pollard's suspension ends Friday, allowing Seabiscuit to enter with his favorite rider.

The last of the foreign threats for the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap arrive today from South America. They are Gandhi II, Plutarco and Sumartra III, all Chilean runners purchased by Lawrence Barker of Los Angeles.

SNEAD MAN TO BEAT

Serves Notice on Hollywood Rivals With a Blazing 66.

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — (AP) — Golf's sharpshooters, winding up a $1,000 a day series of tournaments, tagged Sammy Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., as the man to beat in the $4,000 open tournament starting today. Snead won the Miami open Saturday with a record 267, thirteen under par and took first prize in the Nassau open earlier in the week. He toured the Hollywood Country club course yesterday in 66.

Wet Weather Favors Bears

Rain Menaces Clubs For Rose Bowl Game.

PASADENA, Cal. — (U.P.) — The threat of a wet New Year's day menaced California and Alabama football teams today as they entered a week of wearisome practice sessions that will end with tthe Rose Bowl game Saturday.

Rain fell from the publicized golden skies all day yesterday and through part of the night. Clouds still hovered today, booming the odds on the Golden Bears. Wet weather will hurt the Alabamans more, by endangering their passing, on which they bank for victory.

Considerable surprise was evidenced by spectators when Coach Stub Allison called the California players together for their first workout. Controray to predictions, the Bears will out-weight Alabama by only a pound per man. The Berkeley line and backfield each average 188 pounds. The tide average is 187.

Sammy Baugh to Get Offer From Sewanee.

SWEETWATER, Tex. — (U.P.) —Sammy Baugh, star of the professional Washington Redskins' team, will be offered a 10-year coaching contract at Sewanee university with a $1,000 bonus if his teams beat Vanderbilt, the Sweetwater Reporter was informed today.

Baugh said that he had not received a direct offer, but that he would consider it when received. He has indicated willingness to quit the pro game only for a long-term coaching contract at a substantial salary.

DROUILLARD TO BRUINS

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Clarence Drouillard, of the Detroit Red Wings, and an undisclosed amount of cash, went to the Boston Bruins for Alex Motter today in a deal consummated at the regular meeting of the National Hockey league's board of governors.

Sports, Pure Oils to Clash Tonight

Meet In Feature City Class A League Affray on Mansfield High School Hardwood—Westinghouse Faces Elks.

By CHARLES MARTIN

BASKETEERS of the undefeated Yuncker Sports outfit will be battling tonight to retain their one-game lead in the City Class A league race when they clash with the troublesome Mack's Pure Oils in the feature game of this week's program on the Mansfield high gym at 8:30.

The Oilmen, who last week in their debut lost a thrilling overtime contest to the Westinghouse Electric combine, face an excellent opportunity to knock the Sports-men down the league ladder.

Right Behind Sports.

Vern Jones' Westinghouse quintet, trailing the Sports by a single game, and deadlocked for second place with the idle Elks club, can strengthen its grip on the runner-up spot by turning back the Ira D. Ling's Canzols in the opening game.

Tonight's melees will see several new players in action. The Yuncker club have added Bob Charles, Bob Fisher and Glenn Irey, while the Canzols have secured Ed Chatlain. Charles, Fisher and Irey are veteran City league players. Last season Charles played with Isaly Dairys, while Fisher and Irey, former Shelby high cagers, performed with the National Electrics.

Jimmy Breres' cagemen have failed to click as expected and he will experiment with the new men in an effort to bolster the attack. Both the leaders' triumphs have been registered by two-point margains.

May Test Westies.

With Chatlain in the lineup, the Canzols no doubt will test the power of the Westies. The Electrics bowed to the Yuncker Sports in the opening game, but came back last week to edge Mack's Oilmen. The Canzols dropped their opening game to the Elks and were idle last week.

All-America Gridder In Westies' Lineup.

Inwood Smith, former All-America football player at Ohio State and Mansfield high school star, will make his bedut in the City Class A basketball league tonight with the Westinghouse Electric combine, it was announced today by Manager Vern Jones. Smith will probably start at a guard position against the Ira D. Ling Canzols.

Thomas Encouraged by Confidence of Players.

By HENRY McLEMORE

PASADENA, Calif. — (U.P.) — Right at this moment which is 9:31 a. m., Pacific time, in case you want to set your watch), Alabama's head football coach, one Tommy Thomas, feels that his team is one touchdown weaker than California.

This is the Margin by which he believes the Golden Bears should win the Rose Bowl game on New Year's day. This feeling on the part of Thomas should not be looked upon as pessimism, because it isn't. As a matter of fact, it constitutes what is almost optimism because if you asked the Alabama coach about the game two weeks ago he would have predicted a California victory by anywhere from 14 to 35 points.

But in the short space of a fortnight the boys on his team have forced him to lower Californias superiority to a single touchdown, simply with their tremendous confidence that no eleven men can lick them. They eat, sleep, and breathe victory to such an extent that Thomas is slowly beginning to think that they are right.

"This is the durndest team I have ever coached," Thomas told me. "All the boys believe they are red-hot and that nothing grown out here can cool them off. They felt the same way all through the regular season."

SWING INTO FINAL WEEK

12 Bowl Elevens Put Finishing Touches on Plays For Jan. 1 Games.

(By The Associated Press.)

Twelve squads of college football players, remnants of October's hordes, headed today into the final five days of preparation for New Year's day games. Here are the latest developments from Pasadena to Miami:

Rose Bowl — Alabama, never beaten in the Rose Bowl, takes the odds favoring California lightly. Observers on the coast continued to marvel at the Crimson Tide's fighting spirit as shown in practice. California, after a week-end vacation, also returned to action today.

Sugar Bowl—Santa Clara, after a final two and a half hours on the home field, set out for New Orleans and the game with Louisiana State. The Broncos reported improvement in the condition of Everett Fisher, injured fullback, and Bryce Brown, end.

Cotton Bowl—The only ailing member of Colorado university's squad, Ray Tomlinson, was back in harness. He understudies Whizzer White, the Buffaloes' All-America back. Colorado went through a brief drill yesterday and Rice, after a three-day layoff, returns to the practice field today.

Orange Bowl—Auburn's squad of 36 started drills after a ten-day vacation. Coach Jack Meagher warned the players they could expect a scrimmage session Wednesday.

Michigan State, journeying to Miami, scene of the game, by easy stages arrived yesterday and will drill today. Charles Nelson and Frank Gaines, ends, were injured during the last drill at Gainesville, Fla. Nelson has his knee in a cast and Gaines has an injured hand.

Sun Bowl—West Virginia inaugurates secret practice with today's drill. Texas Tech, the mountaineers' opponent, has been training steadily since renewing practice last week.

East-West—No rest for these boys. The west scrimmaged yesterday with Grant Stone, Stanford end, shifted from the right to the left flank. The easterners had a long scrum Saturday against a pickup team from Oakland.

De CORREVONT TO BE HANDICAPPED BY PUBLICITY IN COLLEGE CAREER

Football's sportlight has turned to a prep school player—Bill De Correvont—who scored 211 points for Chicago's Austin high school and thereby became the most-sought-after college material in the country. George Kirksey will tell in a series of stories what kind of a lad Bill is, how he takes his success and how he earned his fame. The first dispatch:

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

CHICAGO — (U.P.) — His name—Bill De Correvont—sounds like a football player's.

His feats on the high school gridiron are almost unbelievable—he scored 211 points last season. Every college coach from coast to coast would welcome him with open arms. He is idolized, harassed, imposed on, cheered and sought after. Wherever he turns this 19-year-old youth from Chicago's west side belongs to the public.

Daily letters arrive, the phone rings, individuals call in person. It's a radio offer, a motion picture proposal, an advertising tie-up. They all are seeking the use of that magic name "De Correvont."

From now on there will be no peace for Bill De Correvont, the most publicized high school athlete in the history of American football.

As Elmer Layden of Notre Dame so aptly puts it, "De Correvont will never be a sophomore. The public and newspapers will not let him. They will be following every move he makes from now on. His college coach, whoever he may be, will never have a chance to thrust him into the background."

YET Bill is a normal American boy, different from all the rest only in that he has a touch of athletic genius. He would prefer to go his way quietly and without benefit of ballyhoo but he realizes now that that isn't possible.

Fame's treacherous fingers are on him. He cannot escape. A curious public awaits the selection of the college he'll matriculate at next fall. Left or right, day and night, De Correvont's every activity will be chronicled to the world.

No one appreciates his position more than Bill and he is prepared to play the cards like they fall. He isn't suffering from any delusions about what's ahead of him.

"It doesn't make a lot of difference to me what the newspapers say about me," he said. "All I ask is a 50-50 break. I fully realize my position. It's neither one that I asked for nor expected but I'm prepared to face it."

Bill was 19 last Nov. 26. He weighs 172 and is 5 feet, 11 inches. He has unruly blond hair, and blue eyes. His father, who died three years ago, was French and his mother is of Danish-German stock. He goes to the Catholic church.

HE WAS born to be an athlete. He was able to skate when he was two. He started playing with baseballs and footballs at four and when he went to grammar school he was good enough to play with high school boys.

He comes from an athletic family. His brother, Bud, was a star tackle at Austin high. Bill's school. His cousin, George Wilson, plays end for the Chicago Bears. His brother-in-law, Benny Sohn, played halfback at the U. of Washington. Jack Riley, All-American tackle at Northwestern a few years ago, is his second cousin. His grandfather on his father's side, Leonard De Correvont, once played with the Cincinnati Reds. His father was a prairie football and baseball player of note. Until a short time before his death Bill said his father, then about 45, could outrun him and added: "I'm not exactly slow."

SHIP INDUSTRY OF U. S. 'SICK,' REPORT HOLDS

Maritime Commission Hints Federal Ownership Looms on Present Status.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The U. S. Maritime commission, in less than nine months of active operaton, diagnosed the ills of America's crippled merchant marine, prescribed the remedies it believed necessary and embarked on a program of rehabilitation designed to give private shipping the utmost opportunity of survival.

Headed by Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy, President Roosevelt's ace fact-finder and trouble-shooter, the commission conducted one of the most comprehensive studies ever made of any industry. As a result of its findings, it was learned a majority of the commission feels that American shipping is such a "sick industry" that eventually government ownership of all steamship lines is inevitable.

Two startling disclosures stand out—that 90 per cent of the vessels in the American merchant fleet will be more than 20 years old in 1942, and that a government expenditure of at least $25,000,000 annually, with private operators co-operating to the limit, will be required to rebuild the fleet.

Private Capital Aloof.

"Shipping has been, in the financial sense, a sick industry for many years," the commission said in its economic analysis. Private capital has been hesitant to enter the field because of:

"The poor earning records of many of the companies; the fear that disastrous strikes and ruinous operating costs may result from the demands of labor; the lack of confidence in a stable government subsidy policy, and the fact that at some future time subsidy contracts may be cancelled, and the unusual hazards of the shipping industry which, because of its international character, is directly affected by such influences as war, crop failures and similar influences."

Labor conditions on board ships were called "deplorable." The commission said that "unless something is done to reduce interunion friction, to increase the efficiency of our crews, and to restore order and discipline upon our ships, all government efforts to develop a strong American fleet will be futile."

Such a situation, the members said, was caused largely by low wages and "crowded, insanitary and poorly ventilated" quarters for seamen, and a "short-sighted" labor policy on the part of ship operators.

NEW SYSTEM

Safe Drivers to Be Given Cash Under Insurance Plan.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—A new system of liability insurance for private passenger vehicles, under which 'substantial cash rewards' will be given motorists for safe driving, was announced by 38 member companies of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

Explaining the plan, the bureau announced:

"The plan is called the 'safe driver reward plan' and guarantees to policy holders a reward amounting to 15 per cent of their annual insurance premium provided no claims are brought under policies during the 12 months in force after the effective date of the plan. It will be effective in most states probably Feb 1."

Chatterton, Irked By Impersonator, Denies She'll Wed

LONDON—(U.P.)—Ruth Chatterton, 39-year-old American film actress has angrily denied that she intended to marry again and announced that she may institute suit against a woman impersonating her in Funchal, on the Portuguese-owned island of Madeira.

Miss Chatterton denied that she had visited in Portugal and Madeira or that she knew her alleged husband-to-be, Carlos Frietas Martins, a wealthy grape grower.

"I have never been in Portugal or Madeira and I do not know a man called Martins," she declared. "I do not have marriage in mind. I've been in London since November 7 and I am remaining until January."

Miss Chatterton's outburst came after she was informed that a woman in Funchal, Madiera, had been impersonating her and had previously denied marriage rumors in her name there.

WEEKLY BUSINESS SERVICE SECTION

WILLIAMS HAS BEEN HANDLING CITY'S MOVINGS FOR 35 YEARS

Practically every day there are some families moving into other homes — and a good many of these people rely on the Frank Williams moving service to do the job.

And it's not unusual, either, for the Williams concern has been serving Mansfield and vicinity for more than 35 years. It is one of the oldest establishments of its kind in north central Ohio.

Long before the automotive age Williams was handling moving and hauling with a fleet of horse-powered wagons. Today he has 13 pieces of modern motor equipment, including one of the largest trucks in the city, a 22-foot van that can transport the household goods of any average family in one load.

The trucks, re-inforced with steel, are equipped with balloon tires and manned by a crew of expert movers.

Everything handled by the company is insured against any accident that might happen in transit. This is done at no extra cost to the customer.

The Williams moving service is affiliated with the North American Van Lines, Inc., a nation-wide organization that has representatives in practically every major city in the country. As the result of this arrangement, Williams can give "return load" prices on all distant moving jobs as the North American lines furnish loads in either direction.

The Williams moving service also operates a modern fire-proof warehouse at 198 North Franklin street for storing household or other furniture. The warehouse is a brick building, fireproof and dust-proof.

RIVER BOATS GET READY FOR 1938

EAST LIVERPOOL — (AP) — Farmers make hay while the sun shines and operators of packet and excursion steamers on the Ohio river already are drumming up business for next summer as winter begins to tighten its grip on the stream their boats ply.

A "Roustabout club" in Indianapolis and a "Fifty Year club" of Akron will charter the big steamer Gordon C. Greene next summer for two trips. Officials of the line have been showing motion pictures of attractions of the Ohio river for summer vacation tours to tourist agencies in the east.

ENCOURAGING!

Steel News Bright Despite Low Operating Schedule.

Despite the expectation that production may sink to 20 per cent of capacity, the news on steel is encouraging. Inventory of many important users of sheet and strips, particularly in the automobile industry is reported much below normal. Scrap prices are firm and demand increasing.

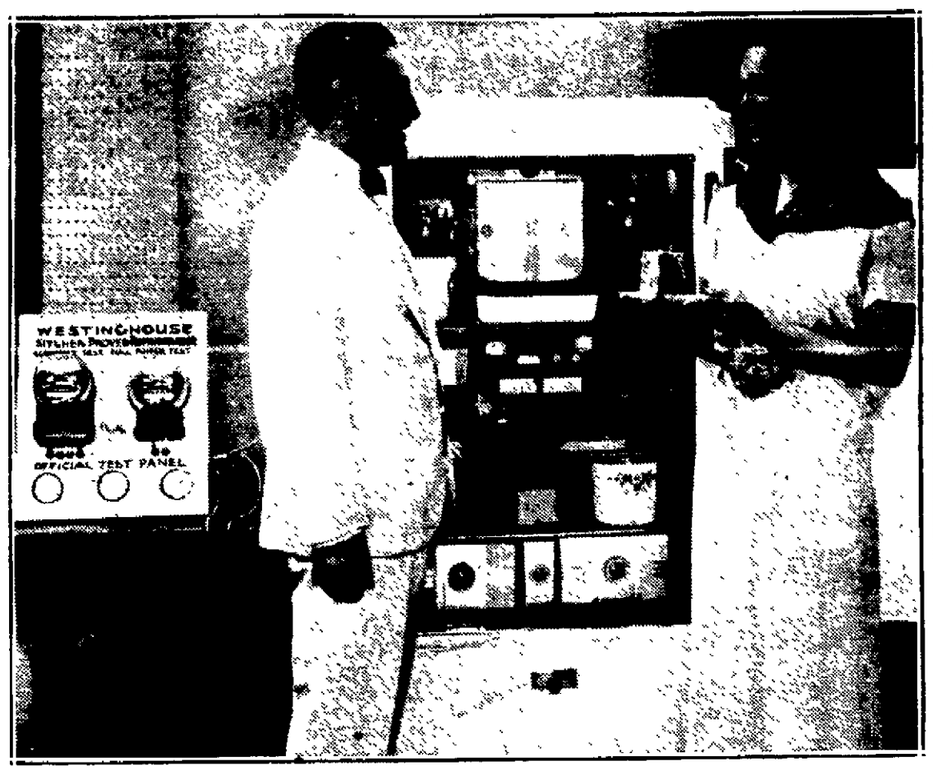
Approximately 2,000 tons of plates, shapes and bars have been ordered for battleships under construction. Inquiries for 24,000 tons of line pipe have been received by leading mills. Reports are that 96,000 tons may be on order by the Maritime commission after Feb. 1. A large oil company is planning the construction of 12 tankers, each requiring about 5,000 tons of steel.

Lettings of constructural steel showed a slight increase over previous weeks. With sizable orders held back awaiting the I. C. C. freight rate decision, some of the railroads have released small orders for locomotives, indicating a pressing need. A new tempering process has been worked out which permits the bending hf hard carbon steel to almost any desired angle, hitherto impossible.

AUTO OWNERS

The United States department of commerce reports that a total of about 7,000,000 automobiles—approximately one-third of all autos being overated in the United States—are owned by families having incomes of less than $20 per week.

Mansfield-Made Product Tested At Equator



Shown above is a section of the first Westinghouse Proving Kitchen which was established in Belem, (Para) Brazil, only a few miles from the equator. Here the Westinghouse refrigerator, made in the Mansfield plant, was tested in the most extreme temperature and conditions it was possible to find on the globe. The test panel attached to the refrigerator is shown at the left.

WESTINGHOUSE TESTS PRODUCTS IN HOMES SCATTERED OVER GLOBE

Not content with the authority and opinions of home economists, designing engineers or with obtaining results from severe and critical laboratory tests for determining the performance of electrical appliances, Westinghouse has gone into homes, into the kitchens of average American homes and put their electric products on test. These tests were conducted by the housewife under the same working conditions found every day in that home.

Electrical manufacturers for many years have proved their product in the laboratory and though their tests simulated home conditions as closely as possible, Westinghouse engineers realized that it was not possible either to duplicate or anticipate many of the unforseen conditions and the trial and error methods of the home in any laboratory.

The first step toward home proving, or kitchen proving as it is now popularly known, was made when the refrigerator testing laboratories rented a home and equipped it with a refrigerator and the testing instruments necessary for the experiment.

A relatively simple test panel and a test report were devisd for this purpose. The test panel consisted of a watt-hour meter to record current consumption and an hour meter to record the running time of the refrigerator unit. Three dial thermometers, one for the milk compartment one for food compartment and one for room temperature and also an automatic counting mechanism to record door openings were included on this panel.

The first series of kitchen tests were set up in foreign countries. Electric refrigerators were sent to proving kitchens located in the farthermost sections of the globe where climatic and geographic conditions are extreme and the refrigerators could be subjected to abnormal operating conditions. The very first was sent to Belem in Brazil, only a few miles from the euator. Others went to Shanghai, China, Singapore, India, Johannesburg, South Africa and to other foreign countries where unusually severe kitchen conditions are found. Soon after the original program of international kitchens, tests were arranged throughout the United States in over 100 homes.

The Kitchen Proving idea was soon extended to include additional appliances. Last June 103 electric range proving kitchens were established in the United States. These tests, similar to the refrigerator test were run for three months.

A series of 25 home tests on electric water heaters also was established.

In addition, 54 laundry proving homes were established. In these homes washers and ironers are being tested. Home laundry hostesses are asked to answer questions on cost per washing and ironing, savings over commercial and outside haud laundering and many other questions which will be helpful to the manufacturer in the future.

The Kitchen Proving and Home Proving programs have grown into an industry trend toward "proof of claims." Other manufacturers are now announcing 1938 models with proved information along the line pioneered by Westinghouse. This has been especially true in the advertising and sales of refrigerators where general claims have been made.

"Westinghouse believes Kitchen Proving of all its products gets away from the intangible claim type of advertising which leaves the customer without actual information of the particular piece of equipment they are purchasing," an official of the company said. "By speaking of proved actualities rather than in generalities, a closer understanding and trust is effected between the manufacturer and the ultimate purchaser."

CLEANER RIDING

A total of about 10,000 air-conditioned railroad cars are being operated by American railroads. Air-conditioning on the railroads began only a few years ago but has increased rapidly because air-conditioning equipment is now manufactured on a mass production basis, thus making its installation economical.

THE TAXPAYERS

Internal revenue statistics show that more than half the individual income taxes collected by the federal government are paid by persons living in four states—New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and California.

LEADERS YIELD FRACTIONS TO 2 OR MORE POINTS

Recently Buoyant Armament Stocks Weaken In Quiet Dealings.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The recently buoyant armament stocks weakened in today's market and leaders generally yielded fractions to 2 or more points.

Dealings were quiet throughout. Many traders extending their Christmas holidays on the theory little could be expected of the market between now and New Year's.

Japanese bonds displayed strength following settlement of the Panay bombing crisis. Corporation loans did virtually nothing. Commodities were uneven.

Although skeptics still were plentiful in boardrooms, trading forces were heartened by the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said improvement in the demand for the metal was expected in the initial weeks of the new year.

While pointing out that dwindling inventories were on the side of steel makers, the review warned that any surge of purchasing was hardly likely in January.

Railroad orders, it was added, always an important element in the steel market, seem to be pivoting on hopes for freight rate increase.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of a short talk by Rev. A. A. Hunter. Mrs. Hazel Bowers, teacher, was presented a gift by the members of the class.

CLOSE PROBE OF HEALY'S DEATH

Comedian's Widow Opposes New Inquiry; Case Ended.

HOLLYWOOD —(U.P.)— Any attempt to reopen investigation into the death of Ted Healy, movie comedian, was opposed today by his widow, Betty Hickman Healy, who is in the hospital with a two-weeks-old baby.

Mrs. Healy said that she and Healy's sister were satisfied with the coroner's report that the comedian's death was from natural causes. They said further inquiry was "absolutely unwarranted."

Healy's first wife and former stage partner, Betty Braun Healy, demanded re-opening of the case. Police reiterated that they had closed the investigation.

RAINS BLAMED

Rock Washed On Tracks Held Train Wreck Cause.

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— While wrecking crews tackled the arduous task of hoisting a 185-ton locomotive up 60 feet to tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad today, officials blamed its tumble and the deaths of the engineer and fireman upon a rain-loosened boulder.

C. G. Grove, superintendent of the line's panhandlue division said:

"We are convinced a rock fell on the tracks Christmas morning and caused the accident."

under such conditions as to them shall seem wise for the proper settlement of the estate."

It is requested in the will that the executors be permitted to serve without bond and that they receive no compensation as executors, but that they shall be allowed "reasonable expenses."

Included in less than three typewritten pages, the will directs that "no hasty action be taken by the executors in settling the estate, but that they be given such length of time to make such settlement as in their judgment will enable them so to do without sacrificing any of the property or securities belonging to the estate."

Executors are given permission to apply the income accruing on the estate to the payment of any debts or claims owed at the time of Mr. Black's death.

In his application for administration of the estate, filed with the will, Atty. Weldon suggests that W. A Springer, D. G. Ogden and Charles W. Fuchs be named appraisers of the estate.

Springer is secretary-treasurer of the Ohio Brass company, while Ogden is assistant auditor of the firm and Fuchs is assistant cashier of the Citizens National Bank and Trust company.

JOB INSURANCE BENEFITS TO BE PAID 21 STATES

Questions and Answers Serve to Explain Who Will Be Eligible For Payments.

(Editor's Note: The first large-scale payments of unemployment compensation will begin in January. The following article gives the answers of Washington authorities to questions about who will be eligible for benefits.)

WASHINGTON — (AP) — How many states will begin paying unemployment compensation in January?

Twenty-one and the District of Columbia. They are Alabama, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, and West Virginia.

What about the others?

Wisconsin began last August. Eight (Indiana, Mississippi, Iowa, Michigan, South Carolina, Idaho, New Mexico and Oklahoma) will begin payments later in 1938. The others will begin in 1939.

What types of workers are covered by unemployment insurance?

Employes Not Covered.

Generally speaking, those with jobs in factories, offices, mills, mines, shops, and stores. Agricultural, domestic and maritime workers are not covered.

Are all workers in the businesses enumerated covered?

State laws vary. In most states the laws apply only where there are eight or more employes on a payroll sometime during any 20 weeks in the year. The number of employes is three, four, or five or more in some states and in 10 states the law applies if there is only one employe. In a few states workers earning more than $50 a week, or some other fixed amount, are not covered.

Are there any other restrictions on those eligible for compensation?

In the states that will begin payments in January the worker must have had a certain amount of employment in 1937 on a job covered by the unemployment compensation law, and be must be out of work through no fault of his own.

Will benefits be payable to workers now unemployed?

Yes, if their unemployment continues into next year and provided they have had work enough or wages enough in 1937 to make them eligible under state law.

How much will benefit payments be?

Usually, about half the unemployed worker's regular full-time pay, but not more than $15 a week.

Where will this money come from?

From the state unemployment fund established by law. This fund is made up of contributions from employers who are required to pay a certain percentage of their pay roll. In some states, employes also are required to contribute a certain percentage of their pay.

Hearty Meals For Snowy Mornings

By PAULINE SCHOFIELD
(Home Economist, Ohio Fuel Gas Company.)

In many homes the first snow usually marks the return of heartier and more substantial breakfasts. Although they may not be compared to the elaborate breakfasts of yesteryear when steak, fried potatoes, and pie constituted the first meal of the day. Nevertheless, this meal still provides a place for griddle cakes or waffles and the customary accompaniments such as tomato juice, sausage, bacon, and of course, a cheering cup of coffee.

Those who must get by on a cup of coffee and a piece of toast for breakfast because they overslept may prefer to have their pancakes or waffles served as a lunch or dinner meal. Regardless of the time of day when they are eaten, this combination is one that is hard to beat, especially when served with plenty of butter and good syrup.

Whether you call them flapjacks, griddle cakes, hot cakes, or pancakes, in order to insure plenty of variety in them keep in your recipe file a supply of good suggestions for slight variations.

Sour Cream Griddle Cakes.

1½ cups flour
1 tsp. soda
1 cup sour cream
1 tsp. salt
2 eggs well beaten

Sift all dry ingredients together, add the liquids, then the well beaten eggs. Mix thoroughly and bake. (12 medium griddle cakes).

Three-Egg Waffle.

2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 egg yolks
1 cup milk
4 tablespoons cooking oil or melted shortening
3 egg whites

Sift together the dry ingredients. Beat together the egg yolks, milk, and shortening. Stir into the dry ingredients, beating until smooth. Then fold in stiff-beaten egg whites. (Makes 6 waffles.)

Variations.

Two strips of cooked bacon cut in small pieces and sprinkled over each waffle just before baking.

One quarter cup uncooked sausage meat sprinkled over each waffle just before baking.

One quarter cup chopped ham, or deviled ham, sprinkled over each waffle just before baking.

One cup of grated cheese added to the waffle batter just before folding in the egg whites.

Creamy, luscious scrambled eggs may be used to top any one of these breakfast waffles.

Sour Milk Pancakes.

1 C. flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 egg, well beaten
Sour milk

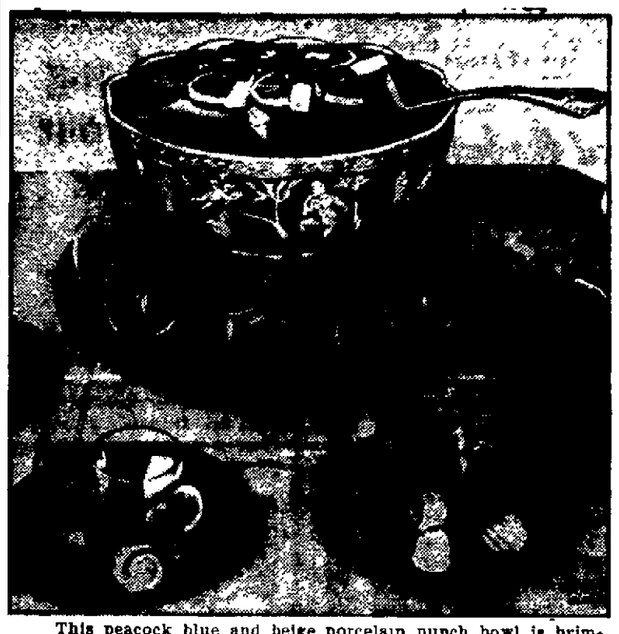
Sift the dry ingredients together. Add the egg and enough sour milk to make a batter the consistency of very heavy cream. Heat the fat a quarter inch deep in a frying pan. Drop spoonfuls of batter into the pan and let them form small cakes. Fry until a golden brown on each side. Serve immediately with tart jelly or apple sauce over them.

Chocolate Waffles.

2 one-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup cooling oil or melted shortening
1½ cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup sugar
2 egg yolks, beaten slightly
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites

Melt the chocolate, combine with the shortening, and cool slightly. Combine the milk and egg yolks, and stir them into the sifted dry ingredients. Add the shortening and chocolate and the vanilla. Fold in the egg whites, beaten stiff but not dry. Bake in a not-too-hot waffle iron. (Makes 4 waffles, or 16 sections.) Serve these hot with a chocolate sauce, chocolate mint sauce, whipped cream, or orange marmalade.

New Year's Cheer



This peacock blue and beige porcelain punch bowl is brimming with claret punch. Cherries, lemon slices and mint leaves are the garnish. The serving plates for the cups match the walnut tray the bowl is standing on.

Kitchen Hints

To cut button holes first place the fabric over stout paper or a blotter. Then draw a chalk or pencil line the length of the hole and cut along that line with a razor blade.

Sagging cane chair seats may be shrunk back into place by soaking them with warm water and soap suds. Allow the cane to dry thoroughly before using the chair again.

Peel, shred, six raw beets, add to saucepan with one-half cup boiling water, one tablespoon each butter and vinegar, one teaspoon salt, pepper; cover, cook over high gas flame until steam appears; reduce flame to simmering; cook nine minutes longer.

To Select Turkeys

Choose the turkey which has few pin feathers and no blemishes. A young turkey has well-rounded contours, clear color and a flexible breast bone. A "blue" tint indicates insufficient fat layers under the skin.

REMEMBER THAT NIGHT

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

(Copyright 1937)

CHAPTER XVI

Karen, wearing a dark red suit and dark red hat, came on. Roxanne held her breath until she spoke and then sighed with relief at Karen's rich, contralto tones. The scene, one of the most dramatic in the play, swept on to the climax. But Roxanne thought, "Karen was right. Lucia Chancery doesn't have her heart in this. She's pretty bad."

Was it because she loved Karen and believed in her that she thought Karen dominated one of most important scenes? "I didn't believe she was as good as this," she thought. The man next to her noisily consulted his program. Was he looking for Karen's name? Proudly Roxanne had looked at it.

When it was over, she hurried out to wait for Karen at the stage entrance. She had to have some one wait for her this night.

At last Karen came out. She was wearing the gray suit and small black hat. Her face was flushed and her blue eyes were dark and bright.

Roxanne said, "You were marvelous! You. . . ."

Tears were in Karen's eyes. "Mr. Tappen liked me, too! He just told me! He said I was fine! Tommy and Marion sent flowers and a note. They couldn't be here. They're in Maryland." She looked straight in Roxanne's eyes. "Philip didn't send me those red roses. You did. Tell me the truth."

Roxanne's cheeks colored. "Guilty. I thought it might help if—if you thought he sent them."

"You didn't fool me. It was sweet of you to think of it."

"How do you feel?"

Karen laughed. "That success is a ladder and I have one foot on it! But I'm happy, Roxanne. Tomorrow night and the night after that and all other nights I'll be here, and every night I'll get a little better. I've done it! I'm actually in a play!"

But ten days later when she came out of the same entrance, no one was there. She stood an instant, shivering in the October wind. Sam Kasten's remark had been prophetic. "Until Tomorrow" had closed tonight. She was out of a job.

On a cool cloudy evening Karen and Roxanne came into the apartment after dinner. Roxanne went into the bedroom. Pulling off a green felt hat from her aching head, Karen sank on the old brown divan.

It had been a week since "Until Tomorrow" had closed. Again she was living on her savings. And except for the vague promise of one man, the week of looking for work on the stage had availed nothing. All she had from her weeks of work were clippings from the Washington and New York newspapers which briefly mentioned her as a new and interesting personality. And a small part in a play which had closed in three weeks held little weight.

Wearing a new black net frock, Roxanne came out of the bedroom. She had tried to be cheerful and encouraging.

Karen said, "I've been everywhere. There's nothing else to do. Did I tell you Marion called and said she was sorry?" She tried to smile. "I was a meteor that flashed across Broadway, the fastest meteor on record. You look nice, Roxanne."

"You're not going back on the roof, are you? If you do, you'll be stuck there. You won't have the courage to leave again." She sat beside Karen on the divan. "I don't know much but I do know you've got everything. You're in a slump now. But think of a lot of famous people who were told they couldn't paint or act or write. That didn't stop them! You had one foot on the ladder and you're going to hold on until you get the other foot on. The first couple rungs are the hardest."

When she left, Karen continued to sit quietly, hearing only the ticking of the little clock in the room. Where was Philip tonight? Was he dancing in a glamorous London place with lovely Lilyan Kane?

Karen looked around at the ugly room and then at herself. Her black slippers were worn from walking. There was a hole in her stocking. Her nails were untended and one had broken today. How unlovely she was! How unlovely were her surroundings! All her fine dreams had brought her to sitting in an ugly room alone, wearing a dress two years old, and near to tears. Where were the glamour and triumphs she had been so certain would be hers? Where was the love in which Aunt Hetty had told her she would be happy and faithful?

Getting up, she put on her brown tweed coat and small green felt hat and went out. No longer could she bear to think of Philip and her failure. Perhaps people on the street or the shop windows would divert her. But beautiful clothes in shop windows only made her think, "I'd like so much to be beautiful for Philip the next time he sees me." Melancholy swept over her in a rush. She thought, "I'd like to run away from loving Philip and from being a failure. But I can't run away from either."

Philip had been in England for several weeks. And though much had happened to him in his life, he would never forget his sensation of seeing Lilyan after their weeks of separation. Driving out to the picturesque country house she and her father had taken, he had arrived in mid-afternoon and Lilyan had opened the door. And before she spoke, before he touched her or kissed her, he knew that he no longer loved her. Holding her in his arms briefly before they went into see her father, he had felt shaken with disappointment and anger, not with Lilyan but with himself.

She was as lovely as he remembered her. She was as lovely as when he had believed he loved her. The green frock she wore that day brought out the dark red lights in her hair and made her soft eyes that changed color the shade of her frock. She had been so happy to see him she had cried a little and then they had gone in to see her father.

Seeing him, a sick old man, Philip had felt worse at his discovery, knowing that Owen Kane thoroughly approved of a marriage between Lilyan and him. He called Philip, "My boy," and said, "My physician tells me I'll be in shape to travel in a few weeks. England is fine, but I want to get home."

And Lilyan and Philip had gone into the garden.

"It's been so long!" Lilyan cried. "Let me look at you, darling!" But suddenly her eyes were puzzled and a little frightened. "You you still love me, Philip? You—you haven't changed your mind about us? We've been away from each other a long time and I thought perhaps. . . ."

He ached. Should he tell her? He couldn't! Perhaps this awful lack of feeling would pass and he would find he still cared. He could not hurt her. She had been through a difficult time. Moreover, he was afraid of what a shock might do to her father. And so there was nothing for him to do except pretend that it was as it had been before she left New York.

He smiled. "Do you think distance and time would change my feelings, Lilyan?"

Her voice was a little breathless. "I didn't know," she said. Then, "Father is so much better. We'll be married any time you like, Philip. I think Father would like us to be married as soon as possible."

That had been weeks ago. Tonight in a London hotel (Lilyan and her father had moved to town and had a suite on the floor below) he stood before a window and smoked a cigaret and tried to face his problem honestly.

There was but one thing to do and that was to marry Lilyan. The past weeks had been the most miserable he had ever spent and thought he had been close many times to telling her that time and distance had changed his feelings, he lacked the courage. Her love for him, complete and unselfish, shamed him.

He thought, "I've got to go through with it! She isn't to blame. In New York I asked her to marry me, begged her to marry me." But there was small comfort in knowing that Lilyan would make him a splendid wife.

Later that evening at a party he said as they were dancing, "Don't you think it would be a better idea to wait until after the play opened before we are married? I'll have that off my mind and we can take a long honeymoon."

Beautiful in white lace, she looked up and smiled sweetly.

"Anything you say, Philip. But let's sail quite soon. Yes, I would prefer being married at home—in church."

He could not tell her that he had always said he would never be married in church. He remembered saying to Brenda quite gaily once, "If ever I do get married, the wedding will be quiet and unpretentious and a chartered plane will take us on a honeymoon. That's my idea of the proper way to get married—up in the clouds actually as well as emotionally!" Now, he thought, there would be weeks of preparation.

MONDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1937.

The new year—of which so much is expected—will soon be here.

Each generation insists on personal liberty to make its own mistakes.

If as much had been spent in preparation for peace as there has been in preparation for war this would be a wonderful world.

Among America's Truly Great.

NEWTON D. BAKER, whose life closed on Christmas day, richly deserves a place in history among the truly great Americans of all time.

His record is one of high idealism and great accomplishment. In private and public life he exemplified human virtues to an extent not ordinarily found in any one person.

His early friendship and close association with Tom L. Johnson, former Cleveland mayor, served to bring Mr. Baker into the forefront of public affairs in that city more than thirty years ago, and gave opportunity for development of ideas and ideals which carried through the activities of later life.

As city solicitor of Cleveland and later as mayor, his thoughts carried along the progressive lines of the Johnson era, with regard for the welfare of all of the people rather than a privileged few.

As secretary of war during the Wilson administrations, Mr. Baker directed mobilization of the greatest army ever raised in the United States and conducted the affairs of his department in a way that won national and world commendation. This was in the line of duty, but as a private citizen Newton D. Baker was a sincere advocate of world peace and his greatest efforts were devoted to furtherance of plans for establishing friendly relations between nations.

Home rule for cities was among the policies which Mr. Baker espoused and it was during his first term as mayor that Cleveland adopted the charter that he sponsored.

In 1932 Baker was seriously regarded for the Democratic presidential nomination, although he had refused to be an active candidate and conformed strictly to his sincere belief that the office should seek the man.

Mr. Baker's most intimate contact with Mansfield came some years ago on an occasion when he was the speaker at the annual Lincoln banquet. The speech which he gave is remembered as one of the finest ever heard here in commemoration of the Great Emancipator.

Joseph P. Tumulty, who was secretary to President Woodrow Wilson, pays tribute to Mr. Baker in a few words which express volumes: "In all relationships of life, whether personal, professional or political, he was a rock of incorruptible integrity. . . . America and the world will sorely miss his fine poise and matchless leadership."

Newton D. Baker is dead. But the torch of enlightenment and constructive thinking which he received and carried forward in such an earnest and effective way, must not die. It must be taken up by youth of today who are willing and able to press onward with equal sincerity and earnestness—in order that America may continually make nearer approach to the ideals which are visioned for later generations.

Young Chiang Becomes Factor.

THE Chinese situation may not be so hopeless as it has looked since the fall of Nanking. "Young Lochinvar has come out of the West," in the person of Gen. Chiang Kuo, son of the Chinese generalissimo. Long estranged from his father by his Communist principles, he has made himself a military power in the wild Mongol country, and is reported lately as rushing eastward with 100,000 crack troops to help expel the Japanese invaders.

It is no secret that those troops are equipped with Russian arms. They have also had Russian training, and doubtless have a liberal infusion, too, of Communist principles. But they are Chinese first of all. They want to keep Outer Mongolia a part of China, and have both their patriotic urge and their Communist prejudices to stiffen their drive against the invading Japanese.

This may be one phase of a general stepping-up of Russian assistance to China. The Russians have completed their second Trans-Siberian railroad and are reported as building a great highway to China. They are massing more troops and war materials near the borders of Mongolia and Manchuria, and around Vladivostok, on the Pacific. If they should drive south while Young Chiang and his Mongolian allies drive east, the Japanese would be seriously crippled in their Chinese operations.

The Japs have recently lost some ground in northern China, and are hesitating about their South China campaign, worried militarily by Russia and diplomatically by America.

An Idea That Is an Idea.

POSSIBLY in a spirit of flippancy—but with all sorts of precedents to support the idea—one newspaper suggests that the government make a Christmas present of a bright new thousand-dollar bill to each person in the United States, with the provision that the money be spent during the first week of 1938—thus assuring a spurt of business to start off the new year.

While objections would probably be interposed to such a plan it appears as practicable as some of the "plans" that have been more seriously proposed—and also has the advantage of not reflecting on the ability of recipients to take care of their money in a lump sum instead of having it doled out to them in monthly payments.

Requirement that the entire $1,000 must be spent in one week might work a hardship on those not accustomed to such elaborate spending, and it might be advisable to allow a month in which to get rid of the full amount.

The idea is so attractive that a good promoter should be able to enlist many dues-paying members.

According to a Harvard professor: "Man made himself out of an ape"—and it appears that, after looking around, some apes decided against making the change.

The constant effort to build foolproof machines is not complimentary to prospective users.

There is no saturation point in the field of luxuries.

Young America Asks—

Should a Bride Give Her Savings Toward Furnishing New Home?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHOULD A BRIDE USE THE MONEY SHE HAS SAVED BEFORE HER MARRIAGE TOWARD FURNISHING THE NEW HOME OR PAYING OTHER DOMESTIC BILLS?

There's a question that'll set every Newlywed a-listenin'. Dear Miss Robinson—

"Here's a problem which so many of my working girl friends face when they marry. Through careful saving, they've accumulated a little bank balance. Should that be used in the new home? MANY OF THEM BELIEVE IT SHOULDN'T.

"But I disagree. I do not believe that it is honorable for either wife or husband to keep their savings in the bank, when bills are owing. Even though the husband is earning a good salary, it is often hard to meet the unusual demands of a new home. I THINK THAT IT IS AS MUCH UP TO THE WIFE TO DONATE HER SAVINGS AS IT IS TO THE MAN!"

Mrs. W. L. Wech—age 29.
Plains, Pa.
($10 prize winner)

And I agree with you 100 per cent, my dear. It seems to me that the average young wife's attitude toward such matters is far from sportsmanlike. There are many exceptions — generous, gallant girls who are real partners. But unfortunately there are all too many who still believe in the old slogan, "WHAT'S YOURS IS MINE BUT WHAT'S MINE IS MINE ALONE."

If women accept equal rights, why shouldn't they accept equal responsibilities? In this new world, why should it be any more shocking or surprising for a wife to help her husband—or even support him in emergencies—than for a husband to support a wife? Let's hear the answers!

NEXT comes impatient Master Cupid!

"Dear Elsie Robinson:

"Last night I asked the sweetest girl in the world to marry me. We're both working and have one hundred dollars saved. (She has linens and a few household articles.) Bubbling with joy, I told my parents she had consented. What a storm I started!

"'You're too young.' 'What do you want to get married for?' 'Why not talk it over? etc.

"My intended wife and I have been keeping company for three years. I'm 23 and she's 19. Young, yes, but happy and in love and sensible. Why do parents always say THEIR children are too young—when they themselves married young? Did the oldsters of yesterday possess any more brains than the young people of today? Couldn't we have a home, raise children and know happiness the same as they?

"Personally, I think parents are just a little jealous of their children. They dislike to lose them. Some parents dislike losing their children's salaries, also. Isn't this just a little selfish?

"I don't WANT to wait a while—we want to get married NOW! (And we're going to, also!)"

Donald S. Dase—age 23.

($10 prize winner)

And here are my congratulations, son. Yet, at the same time I see why your folks are anxious. Many parents ARE selfishly possessive—many, downright greedy. But the vast majority are honestly devoted to their children's interest and have real reason for concern.

Things AREN'T "the same as they used to be when Dad was young," lad. It costs much more to live in even the simplest way; there are pressures, strains and hazards of which Young Love never dreamed in 1897 or even in 1917.

Even though you may have the same love, grit and good sense, marriage is bound to be a harder struggle. The very independence and comfort you both have enjoyed in the past will make it harder. So—don't be too hard on Mom and Dad. They aren't such deep-eyed villains as you think!

"Young America is the Godless generation!" So often one hears that charge brought. Yet, daily, dozens of letters like the following come to this desk:

"Dear Elsie—

"In the midst of all the problems that trouble modern young life, I want to say—I BELIEVE IN GOD. I HAVE FOUND A FRIEND IN HIM. To me, God is not a far-away, statue-like object, but someone real and forever near me.

"When in trouble, I unburden my heart to Him, and a peaceful feeling comes over me, and I know He hears and will help. Always, I trust and believe in Him.

"Do you remember the Master's words, 'Ask and ye shall receive?' It's such a simple thing to do, yet how many would rather ask the help of friends, neighbors, never thinking of Him or considering Him as a friend. Many times have fair-weather friends deserted me. But never has He."

Mary Pashley—age 22.
New York, N. Y.
($5 prize winner)

I believe in Him too, little sister. And I've never yet seen any life fail that trusted AND PRACTICED His love and courage, His faith and fairness.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

IN THE manner of Arnold Bennett's journal: Those deluxe steamer world tour ads with casual mention of Port Said, Calcutta and Singapore touch me off with a stinging wanderlust. Ninety days of drifting! How does one get back into working harness again?

Martha Deane struggled against crushing odds to be cheerful on the radio recently. In short space she lost her father and brother. Homer Croy's newest epistolary fun is to send letters to friends in the private envelopes of important executives marked "Very Personal."

M. and I dined at a place where they have food we enjoy last evening. Dining comforts beyond average. Yet the meal was well nigh spoiled by passing diners kicking our chairs. The solution was simple. We had only to ask to have the table moved, but somehow one never does. We prefer to grouse.

No public entertainer has had more moments of insecurity than Ed Wynn. He seems to vacillate all over the lot, but always lands on his feet. At least a dozen times I've heard he was washed up—though. Today he is probably the biggest box office draw in town.

Cucumbers any style are my zero in food selections. Chiefly because they provide an after-taste more pronounced than the radish. But a grand cook, with a recipe from her native Bavaria has solved the difficulty. She boils and serves them cold in sour cream with a faint sprinkle of scraped onion.

How quickly they drop out of the Broadway parade! I was thinking today of S. Jay Kaufman, who a few years ago was the typical Mr. Manhattan. A columnist, boulevardier and chronic first nighter, he seemed to roll through life without skid chains. Not many did so much for the artist out of a job or the careerist at the threshold. Ring Lardner wrote one of his spiced travesties on the letters one received from S. Jay Kaufman seeking to do a good turn for those who needed it. But of a sudden he deserted the street. One heard of him in Europe, then in California, but to Broadway he never returned. Kaufman was a warm friend of Arnold Daly, introducing him to George Bernard Shaw. Their theatrical association resulted.

Often a simple pout may develop into a full-blown chronic grouch. We once had a household worker who for no reason at all that we could fathom developed a sudden drop in cordiality. At first we thought it due to some outside upset that time would right, and were patient. There were periods of slight improvement, but the general symptoms grew so childish that a fairly efficient worker became inefficient, impertinently glum, and untidy. Finally in one pent-up outburst, the worker left and the entire household was relieved and made happy by the ensuing serenity. We never knew the cause for the mouer and we doubt the employe did. Coddling a grouch distorts clear reasoning that way.

As a sun-down walker frequently meeting the dusk afoot, I believe the most delightful vista is offered on the Champs Elysees from the Concorde to the Etoile, especially when chestnut trees are blooming white. Through the branches, the dying sun shifts its muted glow of lavender, amber and pink, filigreeing a tatter of wind-blown lace. And among the silhouettes in the twilight are the apertif sipper at sidewalk tables, the occasional dog cart with its cobbed horse and precise old flat-derbied royalist sitting back to back with the groom. The nymphs du pave glancing hopefully and pivoting slowly for a pathetic look back. All Parisian and friendly. Paree! Paree!

Someone at the Dutch Treat Club found a striking resemblance between two other luncheers—Grantland Rice and Roy Chapman Andrews. If Rice donned a pair of spectacles, the observers thought, you'd think he was out hunting a dinosaur egg. If Andrews took his off you'd think he was tarpon fishing.

Being an ex-pressagent, up to a few subtleties in my day, I'm always tickled by the art of the modern publicity practitioners. For instance, that slightly overworked trick of radio mazagines bestowing medals for "meritorious service." What a sly way of wrangling thousands in free advertising for the magazine!

THE RECORDING ANGEL

No Definite Economic Course In Readiness For New Year

—By LESLIE EICHEL

THIS CANNOT be an especially happy year-end for President Roosevelt—or for a large part of the American people.

No definite course is being steered around the rocks of inflation and deflation. And the people who are shouting at the commander—for their own interests—have no more idea than he where the deep and safe channel lies. They seem to prefer the rocks, even though they were wrecked on them in 1929.

That is the view of an impartial passenger aboard the ship—in fact, it is the unspoken view of millions of impartial passengers aboard the ship. But they seem to have no voice to express themselves. Others speak for them, and misconstrue their thoughts. That, however, has been true for centuries aboard these ships of state. It may remain true for many more centuries.

PRESIDENT'S PREDICAMENT

President Roosevelt, whose heart is with the people (as writers have said a thousand times), has no ready grasp of economic questions (as other writers have said), but does have a mind that grasps at the dramatic rather than step-by-step reasoning.

His early thought-men, objective reasoners, have gone to doom in earlier battles. Those were the true liberals. A few remain, but they are overshadowed by the dramatists and the routine "yes-men."

Thus, today, the president is surrounded by a cabinet which is largely mediocre and men with a flair for dramatic, sudden switches.

The president's advisers, therefore, are no match for his antagonists— although the president himself, with his power and his personality, may be. As a result, the dramatic moves now are coming from the other side. The railroads, the utility companies, the American Federation of Labor (which has become almost fascist in its reactionism) have sprung very effective dramatic moves. The A. F. of L. joined in emasculating and sending back to committee the wage-hour bill which the CIO supported—surely an unprecedented move for a labor organization.

CART BEFORE HORSE?

Will the dramatic moves "work?" If the government effects a "compromise" with the utilities and they spend tens of millions, will the economic condition of the country become better? If railroads are given rate increases and buy new equipment will their problems be solved? If certain wage minimums and hour maximums are guaranteed, will unemployment be cleaned up?

I doubt whether an economist will say "yes" when asked direct questions concerning this. I have a good part of my life savings in utilities and I work for a wage, thus I am not "anti" any of these groups, but I also have had much to do with plant operation and competition—and that causes me to be skeptical.

Suppose the utilities do enlarge their plant in the face of overproduction. Would that not weaken them? The American industrial plant already is oversize for even 1929 production peaks. Building new plants spreads money out only momentarily. The American industrial plant requires wider distribution of purchasing power. And, if industrialists continue to be blind to the means of obtaining that, which involves great social changes, they will wind up with their plants nationalized, for they will have mortgaged themselves to the government rather than meet change.

As for governmental competition of utilities—or anything else—I, as one who has savings in utilities, believe this competition is not only developing vast new markets, but is teaching private utilities how to produce more reasonably and capture still larger markets. My fear is not of government competition, but of government paternalism to utility corporations, guaranteeing the status quo if they merely spend money. How long, then, till their securities sink to nothing?

RAILROADS

As for the railroads: Increased freight rates merely add to the distress of the body economic and body politic without in the least "curing" the railroads. They cannot be cured without a major operation, even to the killing off of uneconomic lines. The action of their securities indicates that Wall Street has the same view.

WAGES AND HOURS

As for wage minimums and hour maximums and abolition of child labor—which are coming as of social necessity, no matter the reverses and vicious stabbing in the back now—they will not save either labor or business from recessions or depressions. This still does not seem to be the method whereby all who produce may share fully in the product of their labor—thus distributing purchasing power over virtually all the population.

Every plan so far put forward by a well-meaning administration or not-so-well-meaning opposition would increase costs rather than decrease them. Further inflation is no cure for inflation or maldistribution.

FREER TRADE

Of all the men in the cabinet, Secretary of State Cordell Hull is the most outstanding. His belief in the law of economics, his commonsense view that trade and credits must flow unhampered, his battle against nationalistic boundaries, may cause him to be known in the future as the most far-seeing man of the age.

But Hull is not a dramatist and he is hampered in his own department—a starved one financially—by standpatters or scorners. And often, undoubtedly, President Roosevelt has made moves in that department over the head of Secretary Hull. Hull, however, has remained steadfast and calm, an excellent first officer of a ship in a storm.

Timely Editorial

Garage Menace.

Motorists are receiving much advice these days but growing accident lists justify repeated warnings. Here is one prompted by recent fatalities: Be careful how and where you "warm up" the car.

The motor is hard to start during this near-zero weather. Most car owners have been told it is for the good of the car to let the motor run a while, until the oil softens and flows freely, before engaging the clutch and getting out for the day's run. The temptation is strong to stay in the garage while this duty is performed. The garage is not so drafty.

Therein is the peril. There is a subtle poison in the gas from the motor's exhaust. It is colorless and odorless. Very quickly it mixes with the air in the narrow space of the garage. It brings death without warning.

Don't warm up the car in the garage!—Detroit News.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Ninety-one per cent of road-building cost is labor.

We're doing everything to eliminate slums except remove their cause.

Anger, hate and jealousy are the rats, mice and lice of the human mind.

The women's wearing apparel industry is in the hands of men, but no man can tell a woman what she can wear.

In a contemplated action against a possible contingency, the first consideration is what would happen if we did nothing?

These celebrities that evade newspaper interviewers and fight off camera men are denying the ladder by which most of them climbed to fame.

"Pins and Needles."

THERE are two elements that promote the arts—wealth and leisure.

They are not necessarily in combination; for a man of wealth may only be a patron of the arts—a collector, a public contributor of master works of art, say, as in the case of the late Andrew Mellon.

A man or woman of leisure, without wealth, may become an actual producer of art—some form of congenial self-expression, which is the basis of all true art.

For instance, a woman with just a little freedom from household duties and tending babies will do needle work, and some of it, on a certain law of average, will be real art—anyhow, it will all be self-expression.

The very manifest increase in the sale of small musical instruments is by reason of the fact that there are more men and women with shorter hours in drudgery to learn and play them.

Some of the finest musical organizations in this country—bands, orchestras and choruses—are now made up of workers in heavy industry and under professional directors. This would not be true without leisure hours and away from routine occupations.

The most interesting manifestation that art is a creation of at least some leisure is now going on in New York, a musical revue entitled "Pins and Needles," entirely written, produced and performed by members of the Ladies' Garment Workers Union at the Thirty-Ninth Street Theater.

This play house, by the way, is owned by the International Garment Workers Union.

It has been attracting the general public to sold out houses and is highly profitable.

The burlesque or ridicule is about equally divided between the union and the bosses, all in good, clean fun, and appeals alike to both sides of the labor question.

The music is particularly catching and original—written by Harold J. Rome, a garment worker, and doubtless he will eventually be drafted to Hollywood.

One song in particular, "Sing Me a Song of Social Conscience," is the popular hit of the season.

One scene, "Dance Reactionary," is a scream—"leaves 'em layin' under the seats" in exhaustion from laughter.

Even the scenery, costumes and lighting effects are by garment workers—probably scabbing on some other union.

But the fact remains that these people would not have written, produced and acted this revue to artistic and financial success were they required to work 12 to 14 hours per day under sweat shop conditions, which were once generally true in this industry.

There is even prosperity in leisure—anyhow, a lot of fun!

There is a significance to all this and aside from its being a product of a degree of leisure and away from hum-drum employment: This is in the fact that the humor of this revue is about equally divided between the right and left wing of the labor question.

Ridicule is a powerful weapon, and this divided application may give both sides a sense of proportion, cause them to see their folly and mutually behave themselves.

Trees.

ANYTHING that we do for the next generation is beyond money consideration.

A fine tree, anywhere, is about the most beautiful, the most costly thing that we have.

Its cost is not in money; for it can only be reproduced in the element of time.

As a matter of seasonable decoration, I believe, thoroughly, in Christmas trees for the house, church, assembly hall and store—a custom that came with the German emigration to this country, and Christmas, as we understand it here today, is only about 60 years old.

I can remember the first Christmas tree of my boyhood home—my folks got the idea from the Spitznogles, a German family across the way.

I was particularly impressed with this tree by reason of a Spitz-Shepherd dog lying under it and tied to a stove leg—a present from my father and which long remained my boyhood companion.

I wished this Christmas that I knew some children for whom I could set up a tree with a dog tied under it, but all the children that I ever knew are grown up, long ago, which in a way is about as sad as the fact that nearly all my old friends are dead.

But I don't see why more people don't buy their Christmas trees on the roots and set in pots, buckets or tubs of earth, so they could be set out somewhere, anywhere, after the Holiday season, enjoyed by all—all the year around, for years to come and as things of beauty in themselves.

The annual Christmas slaughter of young trees is worse in the destruction of future forests than cows in a woodlot—a cow will travel five miles to eat a young tree sprout.

Ever since I have lived in Cleveland, "nigh on 30 year," at each Christmas season, a beautiful, symmetrical, 50-foot tree has been cut or sawed from its roots, somewhere, and hauled to and set up on a metal base in the Public Square and elaborately lighted and decorated.

Then, after the Holiday season, it is taken down, dragged to a dump and burned or otherwise destroyed.

The spirit of having a public Christmas tree is fine and all that, but the needless destruction of a great tree awakens the same resentment within me as in the case of cruelty to a child or dumb animal.

Why don't they dig up just one tree from the roots, haul it to the Public Square with sufficient circle of its native earth to replant it—permanently?

It could be lighted and decorated each year and enjoyed in the meantime as a thing of natural beauty.

For more than 30 years there has been a relatively simple and inexpensive mechanical device by which huge trees can be taken up, roots and all, and reset in any desired place in the same climate.

It is a combination truck and derrick with a series of hinged knifes in sections, the blades in the form of arrow points which can be driven down, around and under the roots of a tree.

There should be one of these devices in every community and for economy greater than money.

To widen roadways and for the erection of buildings the removal of trees becomes necessary, but their destruction is unnecessary, wasteful to the next generation, and, well, the way we have needlessly chopped and sawed down fine trees is just more evidence against the human race.

WORDS OF THE WISE

When savages wish to have fruit, they cut down the tree and gather it. That is exactly a despotic government.—Montesquieu.

HOLLAND ENDS YEAR OF MANY ACHIEVEMENTS

Country United on Policy; 4-Year Economic Crisis Now Passing.

AMSTERDAM—(U.P.)—This year was one of the brightest for Holland since the Armistice.

After four years the economic crisis came to an end.

Geleral elections showed that the country was behind the policy of economy-inaugurated by Doctor Colijn.

The country's trade balance became increasingly favorable.

The succession to the throne was assured by the marriage of popular Princess Juliana, only daughter of Queen Wilhelmina, to Prince Bernhard von Lippe-Biesterfeld on Jan. 7. Princess Juliana announced over the radio that she was expecting the birth of a child.

Needs Modernization.

The black spot in the year was the need for the modernization of the army as a result of the rearmament of the major European powers. The building of the Maginot line along the eastern French frontier and the line of Belgian fortresses right up to the most southeastern point of the Dutch frontier exposed Holland to the danger of being the country through which any invader might march

To strengthen this tiny country of 12,761 square miles against any possibility of invasion, the army was reorganized and the air-force decentralized Forty-two strong casemates were built along the eastern frontier and 70,000 men, forming part of the "Light Brigade," were stationed for the immediate defense of the eastern frontier.

The air-force was strengthened by the addition of the latest Fokker fighters, while the ground force was equipped with Vickers-Armstrong anti-aircraft guns The infantry was fitted out with anti-tank guns.

Dikes Are Protection.

In addition to its conscript army of 1,680,000 men, Holland has superb natural defenses in the lowlying coastline and maze of canals. The dikes once cut, Holland easily could be flooded if threatened with invasion. The narrow eastern strip outside the water barriers has been protected by strengthening of the army.

An indication of Holland's maritime policy was given when several warships and submarines were sent to convoy Dutch merchantmen, following attacks on neutral ships in the Mediterranean Holland took this step independently and before any of the powers decided to protect their merchant shipping in a similar manner

The outbreak of the war between Japan and China led to an increase of the Dutch defense forces in the East Indies. It is recalled that Holland has a colonial empire that is the third largest in the world. The Dutch East Indies, with 60,000,000 inhabitants and enormous natural resources, are the backbone of this empire.

MILLION LOSE JOBS IN U. S.

But Labor Federation Holds Wage Increases Helped to Sustain Buying Power.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The American Federation of Labor has estimated more than 1,000,000 jobs had been lost since September, but that wage increases through the year had sustained buying power.

The AFL figure was disclosed after Leon Henderson, Works Progress administration economist had estimated the job loss at "around 2,000,000" since Sept. 1.

The Federation said manufacturing industries had been hit hardest by the business recession and subsequent lay-offs, although the report pointed out, November employment was larger than for the same month last year.

The buying power of workers, the Federation said, was sustained by an average earning in industry of 65.3 cents an hour for October, as compared with 58.2 cents for the corresponding month of 1936.

The Federation estimated total November employment at 44,045,000 as against 43,698,000 in November, 1936, but withheld an estimate of total unemployment pending adjustments.

It estimated monthly earnings of wage and salaried workers for October at $100,000,000 over the same month a year ago.

SON SEEKS TO SET ASIDE WILL

Charges Document Filed In Court Not Father's Last Testament.

A suit to set aside the will of Louis Stauffer, late of Mansfield, had been filed tooday in common pleas court by Alfred Stauffer, Mansfield, one of three sons of the deceased.

The plaintiff charges in his petition that the will, which was drawn July 30, 1934, and filed for probate 10 days ago, is not the last will and testament of his father.

The will excluded the plaintiff from any benefits of the estate, except for a $5 cash bequest. It provides for the equal distribution of a 100-acre farm in Franklin township to two other sons, Harold and Henry, both of Mansfield, and leaves a property on Newman street to the son, Harold.

DEMS FORESEE WIDENING OF PARTY BREACH

Open Battle For Control of Party Looms For Beginning of New Session.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Some senate Democrats forecast today that an open battle for control of the party would develop between liberal and conservative legislators during the coming session of congress.

Although unwilling to be quoted by name, they predicted the present division would carry over into the 1940 national convention.

Seriousness of the party split was acknowledged generally by congressional Democrats in private conversation. Most of them deplored it, but some said they welcomed it as a means of bringing a realignment of parties along more realistic lines.

Hinges on Roosevelt.

Possible long-range results of the division were outlined differently by almost everyone discussing the subbject. Many believed that President Roosevelts course during the next three years would be the determining factor.

The belief in some quarters that the fight would be carried on more openly during the next congressional session was based on two factors—the number of controversial issues coming before the legislators, and the approaching off-year elections.

Administration friends have made no secret of President Roosevelt's intention to continue his fight for wage-hour legislation, blocked earlier this month by southern Democrats in the house .

While this rebellion was more along sectional lines than the senate revolt on the Roosevelt court bill, many southern Democrats were active in both.

Should an appreciable number of Democrats continue to block various administration measures, many of the president's supporters forecast he would call for a showdown in the primaries next spring and summer.

But if the president should rally sufficient strength to push his program through, some of the speculators said, the showdown might be delayed until the 1940 convention.

SINGING MOUSE HAS SINGING SON

So Maybe Minnie Will Soon Be Doing Duets.

WOODSTOCK, Ill.—(AP)—Minnie, the musical mouse, may soon be singing duets with a son.

Herbert O. Gensch, superintendent of the Chicago industrial home for children who discovered Minnie in a coal bin a year ago, disclosed today she had a son, one of 13 offsprings, who has shown some ability as a warbler.

Tomorrow will be the first anniversary of Minnie's debut on a nation-wide radio hookup. In the first year of her career, Gensch said, she earned $1,000, which was turned over to the children's home.

had been ordered ready to sail up the Yangtze river Tuesday with Consults John B. Allison and James Espy to reopen the embassy, but the request may prevent the reopening.

The gunboat will leave tomorrow, regardless of the embassy question, with the salvage tug Saucy to examine the possibilities of raising the United States gunboat Panay, sunk by Japanese bombs in the Yangtze above Nanking Dec. 12.

Japan's steady spread across China, meanwhile, centered at three focal points.

In North China, Japanese forces had crossed the Yellow river between Tsinan, capital of Shantung province, and the sea. Tsinan, unconfirmed Japanese reports said, already has been captured.

On the North China coast, seven Japanese warships were reported sighted off Tsingtao, Shantung port which had been exempted until now from Japan's general coastal blockade.

It was believed the war vessels were to enforce a newly ordered blockade of Chinese vessels at Tsingtao.

The third war theater was in Chekiang province, south of Shanghai, where Japanese columns aimed at Fengwha, birthplace of China's leader, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, and Ningpo., important Hangchow bay port. The provincial capital, Hangchow, was occupied Friday.

PANAY INCIDENT 'CLOSED'

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The state department indicated today it considered a "closed incident" the international situation arising from the bombing of the gunboat Panay, although the inemnity remains to be fixed.

Officials made it plain that this government would watch closely to see Japan carries out its assurances that there would be no unlawful interference with American nationals and interests in China.

Secretary Hull, replying Saturday to Japan's promises of respect for American rights in China, said the United States considered them "responsive" to its protests and demands.

Japan's first apologies promised full reparations for the sinking of the Panay and three Standard Oil boats on the Yangtze river Dec. 12. In a second note Japan added guarantees that Americans and their property would be protected.

State department officials said the amount of indemnification would not be determined for some time. Besides the property loss resulting from the bombing, three men were killed and several wounded.

JAPAN SATISFIED

TOKYO —(AP)— Japanese government officials expressed general satisfaction today over termination of the Panay incident despite disagreement of Japan and the United States on motives of the Japanese aviators who sank the American gunboat Dec. 12.

"The United States must adhere to the findings of its naval board of inquiry," said a foreign office spokesman. "And Japan must adhere to the findings of its own investigators. Japan forever will insist it (the bombing) was a mistake.

"Japan could not do otherwise."

(And its acceptance of Japan's guarantee against further infringement on United States rights, the state department said it would rely on the findings of the American naval board of inquiry. This was taken to mean that the United States government does not admit the Japanese version that the attack was entirely unintentional.)

CAPTURES TSINAN

SHANGHAI —(AP)— The Japanese army tonight announced the complete occupation of Tsinan, capital of Shantung province and the seventh Chinese provincial capital to fall to Japanese forces.

Tsinan was the objective of one of several Japanese columns that swarmed across the Yellow river over the week-end with the evident purpose of adding all Shantung to Japan's zone of conquest.

Japanese dispatches also reported the capture of Weihsien, important junction point of the railway between Tsinan and Tsingtao, chief port of the province.

PLANE TO RUSH NEWSREEL FILM OF PANAY SINKING TO CAPITAL

NEW YORK—(AP)—A specially-chartered United Air Lines plane is scheduled to rush the first newsreel films of the bombing of the U. S. S. Panay from Alameda, Calif., to New York tomorrow—and the first unedited print will be flown to Washington, D. C. it was announced today.

Norman Alley, Universal Newsreel cameraman, who "shot" the dramatic scenes of the bombing, standing on the deck of the Little American gunboat while it was under fire, will accompany the films on the trans-continental flight.

The Associated Press Newsphoto service has obtained exclusive rights for newspaper reproduction of the films.

Universal officials said today the first showing of the graphic pictures will be made within 24 hours after their arrival in New York, probably reaching the screen late Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

"It will be a three-reel picture, about 3,000 feet and running half an hour," an official said.

Alley was described by Universal officials as a "Soldier-of-Fortune Cameraman" and one of the top men in the profession.

Originally, the films were scheduled to arrive at Alameda this morning aboard the China Clipper, from Honolulu, but Pan-American Airway officials said reports of snow in mid-Pacific and "ice and gale conditions" off the California coast caused a 24-hour postponement of the flight. The plane is now due at Alameda tomorrow morning.

DESCRIBES WAR IN FAR EAST

from them almost as accurately as shells from field guns.

Columns of men simply dissolved into fragments of torn flesh.

Houses disappeared in clouds of dust which settled over the bodies of the farm families that had been in them.

I went into Chapei—one of the principal industrial areas of the Shanghai Chinese city — which I had seen destroyed during the Chinese-Japanese hostilities of 1932.

The destruction then was almost as nothing compared to this destruction.

I went to Woosung, a sort of port subburb of Shanghai.

I saw children, women, and men die in hundreds.

Many of them were blown into pieces too widely scattered to make possible a decent burial.

Some of those who lived through the continuous series of attacks and counter-attacks were left with only stumps for limbs. Others were blinded.

I saw the development of the Chinese "scorched earth" policy.

That policy was adopted at the suggestion of leaders of the Chinese Communist party who reconciled their long quarrel with Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and were taken into the central Chinese government after the war started.

It is designed to destroy everything destroyable in the path of the enemy's advance so that he cannot live off the countryside.

I saw grain crops levelled, farm houses burned, buildings dynamited, bridges destroyed, and even footpaths gashed with great holes so that they could not be walked upon.

I went into north China.

The dikes along the rivers there were broken and the fields turned into muddy lakes dotted with mounds of rotting grain.

Tientsin was a shell of the gay city I had known a few years ago when it was my headquarters. Piles of crushed brick and pieces of broken concrete were all that was left of buildings I used to frequent.

I heard a description of war from broken Chinese soldiers who were invalided from the front. They whispered of men who were chained to their machine guns so that they could not cease firing when they were assigned to cover a retreat. They told of officers who enforced obedience with automatic pistols.

Mansfielder One Of Youngest U. S. Great-Granddads

Peter Lissekam, 59-year-old Mansfielder, makes no claims to the title as the nation's youngest great-grandfather, but he's certain his rating is better than that of the Evansville, Ind., claimant who is 62.

Lissakem, who lives on Bahl avenue, entered the great-grandfather class two months ago when his granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Hill, also of Mansfield, gave birth to a son. Hiss is employed in the News-Journal circulation department.

The child has three great-grandparents living — Mr. and Mrs. Lissakam and Mrs. Ida Johnson of Marion, who is Hill's grandmother.

Lissakam was a father at 23; his son, Peter, jr., at 16, and his grandson, Hill, at 20.

The two leading contenders for the title of youngest great-grandfather title are T. J. Barlow, Panama, Okla., who became a great-father a year ago when he was only 56, and Jerry M. Wilson, 58, of Akron.

ism when President Woodrow Wilson appointed Baker secretary of war. Army officers regarded him a pacifist and gave him a doubtful reception. But when the United States entered the war, he handled the mobilization of men and war materials with such efficiency that General James G. Harbord, a Republican, later called him "the greatest secretary of war, in war, that our history has yet produced."

Baker returned to Cleveland in 1920, once more entering private law practice. But he was drafted to head the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, and from time to time answered calls to public service.

His grave will be near those of other prominent Cleveland residents, including John D. Rockefeller and Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France.

He said she sometimes used the name of Jean Kane. The other girl's name, he told police, was Cecile Shapiro.

highways, United Press reports said.

In Mansfield, Paul Shields, 26, Trimble road, suffered a fracture of his right ankle when he was knocked down by a hit-skip driver Christmas night at West First and Crouse streets. He was treated at General hospital.

Miss Mary J. Averill, of 34 Carpenter road, was treated at the hospital for arm injuries suffered in a collision of two automobiles at Park avenue west and Bowman streets. She was an occupant in a car driven by Mrs. R. G. Averill, her mother. The vehicle collided with an auto operated by Edward Williams of 183 Marion avenue, police said.

When two cars sideswiped Friday night on routes 42 three miles south of Lexington, Mrs. Lynn E. Welches of Dayton received arm injuries. Five other passengers of the two cars, driven by Lynn E. Welches, Dayton, and Sam Fein of Chicago, escaped injury.

Machine Overturns.

Mrs. C. P. Mapp of Bellevue, Pa., received cuts on her hands when the car in which she was riding with three other members of her family turned over along route 30 about 5 p. m. Sunday just east of Mansfield. The car, operated by Mrs. Mapp's son, Charles, 15, collided with a truck driven by C. E. Card of Alliance, according to Corp. Scott Radcliffe of the State Highway patrol.

Seven persons were hurt, none seriously, in two traffic accidents at Bucyrus and Sycamore Saturday night. Lloyd Miller and Clarence Aurand, both of Sycamore, suffered cuts about the head and face when the car in which they were riding crashed into a parked automobile at Sycamore.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Genzer of Bucyrus; J. R. Ferguson of New Washington, and Winifred Brouse and Harold McIntre of Akron were treated at Bucyrus City hospital for cuts and bruises after cars driven by Ferguson and Genzer collided on route 30 about six miles east of Bucyrus.

2 Shootings In Ohio.

Ohio's Christmas toll included Mrs. Cordelia Campbell, 55, socially prominent, Youngstown resident, who was shot to death at a Yule party. Her heiress daughter, Louise, was held in jail pending the outcome of an inquest.

A Christmas party at Toledo resulted in the accidental shooting of John Miller, 39, struck by the charge from an aimlessly fired pistol.

At Greenville, Donald Royer, 15, fell off a Christmas bicycle and was drowned in seven feet of water. Three men died at Canton in a collision of an automobile and a truck, and four Ohioans ended their own lives in Yuletide despondency.

Kentucky counted 22 dead in its check of holiday fatalities, with five persons killed in shooting affairs and a sixth stabbed to death. Alabama had 13 deaths from gunfire or stabbings in holiday brawls.

In Chicago, Thomas Burns, 32, admitted killing his father in an argument over the decoration of the family Christmas tree. Two brothers were held at International Falls, Minn., in connection with the slaying of their father as he waited to give his estranged wife a Christmas present.

Clear and cool weather over much of the eastern half of the nation was given as the cause of the huge loss of life in traffic accidents. Thousands of motorists swarmed the highways enroute to their homes or in visits to relatives over the Christmas holiday.

Thirteen persons died in two traffic crashes, one at Wellsburg, W. Va., and the other at Wilmington, N. C. Six men died in the West Virginia tragedy when an automobile plunged 75 feet into a creek. In the other crash, seven persons drowned when their car dropped from a bridge into a river.

Jailed As Purse Thief 5 Minutes After Robbery

A 26-year-old colored man was held in the city jail today for investigation in connection with a purse snatching Friday night, the fourth reported in the city within a week.

He was captured by police on Surrey road less than five mintues after Mrs. Jacob E. Maiyer, 474 Springmill street, had been robbed of her purse as she walked along Springmill at Miller street.

Police said the man, only partially identified by Mrs. Maiyer as her assailant, had in his possession the exact amount of money that the woman had in her purse when she was robbed. The empty pocketbook was found in the rear of a house on Lafayette avenue.

Mrs. Maiyer told police that while she was walking on Springmill street, a man approached her from the rear, struck her in the head, snatched her purse and ran south on Miller street. The purse contained a $5 bill, a $1 bill, a nickel and three pennies, she told police.

Police said the man denied being in the vicinity of Miller street and that he had received the money from a relative.

daughter had fired it once in the house.

Prosecutor Paul J. Regan said the inquiry indicated that "Miss Campbell had been drinking before the shooting."

Paul Z. Hodge, attorney for Miss Campbell, visited her in jail yesterday. No charges were filed against her.

Miss Campbell traveled extensively abroad with her mother and found pleasure on the large Campbell estate in riding horses and breeding dogs.

She was described by Prosecutor Regan as being "pretty well unnerved" by the events of the tragic Christmas party and her subsequent experiences in the jail.

She was taken to the jail after giving blood for her mother in a transfusion operation at a Youngstown hospital.

Visited by Relatives.

Sheriff Roy Hardman served a Christmas dinner to her in the jail and she awaited developments nervously yesterday, jailers said, as prisoners on the floor below sang hymns.

She was visited briefly by a sister of her mother, Mrs. Marie Ravelli, of England. Mrs. Ravelli and her husband, E. G. Ravelli, were visiting at the estate at the time of the shooting. Also visiting the Campbells was Mrs. Uretta Bronch, of London, a sister of Miss Campbell.

Detective Luarde went to the heavily wooded estate after the shooting. He said Miss Campbell had gone to her car. The keys were not there and she returned to the house with the gun. He said the investigation indicated the gun had been fired twice.

Relatives of Mrs. Campbell at the estate declined to discuss the occurrence. Prosecutor Regan said they would be called to the inquest.

Mrs. Campbell's husband, Louis J., former president of Electric Alloy Steel company of Erie, Pa., died in 1933. James A. Campbell, long colorful figure in Mahoning valley steel industry, died in 1935.

Assembly Spurs 'Legal Graft' Inquiry, Relief Fight

LIQUOR, ROAD DEPARTMENTS FIRST ON LIST

'Hatchet Men' to Probe State Contracts; Aid for Needy Up to Tax Committee.

COLUMBUS—(AP)— The Ohio legislature's twin-barredded fight—over a premanent relief program and a senatorial investigation of state departments—moves toward an intensive stage this week.

The "hatchet men" inquiry into reports of graft in the letting of state contracts and purchase of amterials was scheduled for early public hearings and its leaders promised speedy delving into operations of the Ohio government.

A house-approved relief program was before the senate's committee on taxation and relief with the supporters and foes of Gov. Martin L. Davey in a contradictory alliance.

Davey Plan Eliminated.

Members of the Democratic majority in the house sent to the upper chamber a series of poor relief bills that failed to include the governor's major requirement—equal matching by the local communities.

The senate majority, normally opposed to Davey's legislative a.d fiscal policies, indicated it would back the governor's program while some of the administration's regular supporters in that chamber were ready to fight the plan when committee hearings begin tomorrow.

Former Sen. James Metzenbaum of Cleveland, special counsel for the investigating committee, was reported ready to subpoena witnesses believed to have information that "considerations" had been paid to secure state contracts.

The committee was expected to give first attention to the liquor and highway departments.

Although financing of the investigation has not been arranged, members, counter on senate and gubernatorial opproval of a $40,000 appropriation. Gov. Martin L. Davey vetoed a $50,000 fund for a similar inquiry last summer but said recently he was unconcerned over the current probe.

Up to Committee.

The next move toward relief was up to the senate taxation committee, reported favorable to Governor Davey's demand for matching by local governments of state funds. The house has approved a $15,000,000 plan for 1938 as a compromise between the governor's and one backed by city and county officials, which would have the state carry the major burden of indigent aid.

Neither house planned working sessions until the senate taxation committee had a chance to offer its relief views.

"Burn Me," Cries Youth After He Murders Girl, 22

NEWARK, N. J.—(U.P.)—Vincent Franco, 26, begged police to "burn" him today because he killed Antoinette Imperiale, 22, while more than a score of Sunday motorists looked on, too horrified to act. The girl had refused to marry him.

Franco struck the girl with an iron pipe and shot her twice as she sat beside him in a car. Then, as she fled, he ran her down with the car and drove it over her body again and again. Then he fired two more shots into it. By that time spectators had summoned police.

Sergeant Arthur Coakley prevented Franco from shooting himself. The girl was dead.

"Did you do this?" Coakley asked.

"You can burn me for it!" the rejected suitor cried. "I did it. I killed her because I loved her and she wouldn't marry me."

Up and Down THE STREET

The state highway department is all set to battle drifting snows in Richland county again. Orange picket fences, designed to prevent snow from drifting across the main highways, add color to the roadsides. The routes crossing the county from north to south have been given the most attention, with the four-foot fences constructed several feet to the west of the roads in places where drifting is encouraged by the topography.

Persons seeking Police Chief Meade K. Bates at the city building shouldn't have the least bit of trouble finding his office in the future. On the door is a large plaque with the words: "Office of the Chief of Police." It was a Christmas present to Bates from Detective Harry Copper and Lee Remy.

Photographers who go in for colored pictures and looking for subjects would probably be interested in a Mansfield bowling league. The circuit—the Commercial B league—is by far the most colorful in the city. Roy Vaughn, its secretary, contends. There are 12 teams in the league and each one has different colored shirts. "You couldn't find any more colors on a Christmas tree," Vaughn says.

Richard Olin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Olin, 185 Brinkerhoff avenue, and a student at Kenyon college, didn't have a chance to spend Christmas with his parents this year, but he is not being deprived of holiday festivities. The former Mansfield high school athlete is a member of the Kenyon college swimming team, which is in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., staging a series of exhibitions for an acquatic forum being conducted there. Olin will absorb Florida sunshine until after the first of the year.

A hospital may not be the best place in the world to spend Christmas, but a Christmas tree sort of helps. So hospital attaches put one up on the first floor, and decorated it. Patients on the road to recovery were able to see it, and thus the day was a little brighter.

BUREAU BACKS 'GRAFT' PROBE

Farm Organization Urging Support For Inquiry In Ohio Road Department.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The Ohio farm bureau today expressed the hope that the Ohio senate investigation of alleged legal graft would result in "removal of the highway business of our state from the damaging influence of politicians and grafters."

In a statement issued by Edwin J. Bath, legislative representative, the farm organization urged that "every citizen" inform his representatives and senators that the public demands the inquiry be given proper support and adequate time to complete the investigation.

"If there is collusion between the highway department, material interests and road-builders; if we build roads of many types or just any type just to furnish the material interests with business; if certain contractors are bought off by other contractors; if roads are not up to the standard for which the contracts call; in the name of common decency let us expose it and take the proper steps for correction," the statement said.

According to reports, the highway and liquor departments are to be the first to be investigated by the "hatchetmen" committee.

Former State Senator James Metzenbaum, Cleveland, legal counsel for the committee, was expected to return here today to arrange for beginning of formal hearings.

PROPOSES TO EXCLUDE SMALL CORPORATION FROM PROFIT TAX

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Members of a house subcommittee said today they had decided to divide corporations into three tax groups, according to the size of their incomes.

The plan, they said, probably would not involve increasing a proposed income tax on corporations showing profits of between $20,000 and $25,000. It would exempt additional firms from the widely-criticized undistributed profits tax.

Groups proposed:

1. Corporations with incomes of $25,000 or less would pay a normal income tax, probably of 12½, 14 and 16 per cent, and no undistributed profits tax.

2. Companies with large incomes would pay an undistributed profits tax of 16 to 20 per cent.

3. Firms with medium-sized incomes, ranging up from $25,000, would be placed in what subcommitteemen termed a "notch." Their taxes would be lower than the 16 to 20 per cent undistributed profits tax of the big corporations but somewhat higher than the levies of firms paying only the normal income tax.

Thus these intermediate corporations also would be exempt from the undistributed profits tax.

By taxing corporations in three categories, legislators said, provision can be made for a gradual increase, instead of an abrupt jump, in the tax rate.

The details of the method of treating these corporations have not been worked out, subcommitteemen said.

ASKS INQUIRY

Lawmaker Wants Congress to Probe Monopoly Practices.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Carl A. Hatch, D., N. M., today called for a congressional investigation of alleged monopolistic practices of big business as outlined in a radio address last night by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson.

Hatch said he believed it would be proper for the special senate committee investigating unemployment and relief to include in its survey a study of Jackson's charges.

Hatch is a member of the committee, which will begin public hearings Jan. 4, one day after congress convenes in regular session.

FREE CHILD AS ARMED CITIZENS PURSUE AUTOS

Abductors Demand $3,800 In Kidnaping But Posse Breaks Up Plans for Flight.

CENTERVILLE, Ind. —(U.P.)— State police and special deputies pressed their search today for two men who kidnaped three-year-old John Bryan Christmas eve, then released him unharmed when hampered by close pursuit of irate citizens.

The car which the men used in their flight, was found last night on a lonely road near Newcastle, Ind., 40 miles west of Centerville.

The boy, son of John L. Bryan, moderately wealthy cashier of the Centerville State bank, was kidnaped for $3,800 ransom. No money was paid, however.

Phones Mother.

When the abduction occurred Mrs. Bryan was visiting her husband. The men entered the home and forced the child's 17-year-old nurse Norma Schroy, to telephone Mrs. Bryan and tell her to return home. Then one of the men fled with Miss Schroy and the baby. When Mrs. Bryan returned the remaining gunman ordered her to call her husband and say:

"Bring home $3,800 quickly or you'll never see your son again."

Instead of obeying, Bryan ran to the street and summoned passersby and employes of nearby stores. They hurried to the home, arriving as the remaining desperado sped away in the Bryan auto with Mrs. Bryan and Julian Dunbar, a grocer who went to the home in his truck.

Mrs. Bryan and Dunbar were released 10 miles northwest of the city. The baby and nurse were pushed out of the other gunman's car near a farm home after they had been held captive for more than two hours.

Kidnaper Worried.

"The kidnaper said he had no plan to keep us prisoners for a long time," Miss Schroy said. "He was worried because the other man didn't appear. So he said he would have to let us go."

The two were driven home by a farmer.

Officers believed the kidnapers met Saturday near Newcastle, abandoned the Bryan car—the one recovered—and drove off in their own machine.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

The Way to Peace.

EVENTS OF the last few days are such as to convince usually well-informed men in Washington that behind the scenes an effective, though unofficial, understanding already has been arrived at between the United States and Great Britain which will insure the co-operation of the fleets of the two nations in dealing with Japan in the Far East.

SUCH an understanding, while not formally admitted, it is pointed out, is as inevitable as it is essential. Not to have it would be supremely unintelligent upon the part of both countries. It may or it may not eventuate in overt action. That depends upon developments, but its existence is indispensable. There is no other way in which either nation really can protect its interests or safeguard against repetition of the outrageous incidents from which both have suffered and for which Japan offers profuse apologies and regrets—but repeats. The eagerness of the British for this course has been made apparent in various ways, and certainly Mr. Roosevelt's recent declaration in favor of co-operation lends substance to the idea. With whom can we co-operate except the British?

ALREADY both the British and our own fleets are in position for the quickest possible shift to the Orient and in certain informed quarters there is an expectation that before many weeks have passed there will be found in Chinese waters a concentration of British and American war vessels, using Singapore as a supply base, of such proportions as to be overwhelming so far as Japan is concerned—able to crush her if forced. It is known that action along this line has been seriously considered by the president, and it is known that his naval advisers strongly favor it; that Mr. Roosevelt inclines that way.

THE ARGUMENTS are clear. For example, it is contended that the overpowering force which complete British-American naval co-operation could muster would be such as to make it unnecessary to fire a shot, but it would effectually halt Japan and compel her to accept dictation. It is pointed out, further, that the president would need no authorization from congress to send our fleet to the East. While such a move unquestionably would bring howls of protest from the kind of people who support the Ludlow war referendum resolution, he would be supported by the bulk of the country, certainly by the bulk of the press.

THOSE who urge active British-American naval co-operation to end the Chino-Japanese conflict are convinced that this will not promote war, but peace—and not only peace in the Orient but peace throughout the world. If, through a formidable assembly of naval strength, it can be made plain to Japan that this country and Great Britain are determined to put an end to her aggressions against China, protect their own interests and no longer accept apologies for such things as the Panay affair—it will have a very calming effect upon the aggressor nations of Europe, go a long way to avert war on that continent.

IN OTHER WORDS, there is a firm conviction in the minds of men whose judgment ought to be soundest—and this includes some of the leading diplomats in Washington—that nothing could be better for world peace than a joint demonstration against Japan by the British and American navies, backed up by the French. Once show to the world that the three great democracies are determined and prepared to fight together and there will be no war, because no other combination could stand against them. Financially and in armed power, their superiority would be too great to cope with. The president never said a sounder thing than when, in reply to Mr. Landon's telegram, he expressed himself as against isolation and for co-operation. Co-operation means, of course, with Great Britain and France. It can't mean anything else. There is a feeling that soon after congress convenes next week a message on co-operation in the foreign field may come from the White House. It is a subject upon which the president has been concentrating for days and upon which he is reported as feeling deeply. So does Secretary of State Hull.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Operatic Helen Jepson's introduction to movie work was typically filled with annoyances. Miss Jepson, slim and comely, and Charles Kullman, also from the Met, were principals in the first and only scene of the first day of "Goldwyn Follies."

They were doing a scene from "La Traviata"—doing it over and over. The setting was beautiful, like Miss Jepson, whose dark blue evening gown was the most vivid spot of color on the stage. The other women and the background players all wore pastel shades, making it easier for the color camera to pick out the star.

Kullman and Miss Jepson were singing with full orchestra But things went wrong at least 10 times while I watched and listened, and the two singers would start anew. The lights went on and off time and again, being "saved" during waits. But neither Miss Jepson nor Kullman acted like an opera star. Both smiled, sat, and sang on order. For all I know they're still there, still meeting the thousand and one technical obstacles of movie-making—but at least Goldwyn's $2,000,000 extravaganza has been launched.

* * *

Every picture about Annapolis has that scene wherein the upperclassmen twit the freshman and make him go through farcial antics for their amusement. "Hold 'Em, Navy!" is no exception. We find John Howard giving elaborately serious commands to Lew Ayres, the freshman. The result will be Ayers' forced demonstration, with roly-poly Benny Baker as victim, of how a gentleman kisses a lady.

Couple Hurries to Cleveland; Maid of Honor Stricken.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Miss Beth Campbell of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Joseph H. Short, jr., of Vicksburg, Mass., planned a hospital wedding today so the bride-elect's sister, Miss Flora Campbell, would not miss her role—that of maid of honor.

Flora will be absent tonight from her role of leading lady in the New York production "Many Mansions."

She was stricken with appendicitis while en route from New York to Toledo where her sister's wedding was scheduled for last night.

Short and his bride-elect said they would be married tonight in the actress' hospital room if hospital officials decide the patient's condition would permit.

DEMS FORESEE WIDENING OF PARTY BREACH

Open Battle For Control of Party Looms For Beginning of New Session.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Some senate Democrats forecast today that an open battle for control of the party would develop between liberal and conservative legislators during the coming session of congress.

Although unwilling to be quoted by name, they predicted the present division would carry over into the 1940 national convention.

Seriousness of the party split was acknowledged generally by congressional Democrats in private conversation. Most of them deplored it, but some said they welcomed it as a means of bringing a realignment of parties along more realistic lines.

Hinges on Roosevelt.

Possible long-range results of the division were outlined differently by almost everyone discussing the subbject. Many believed that President Roosevelts course during the next three years would be the determining factor.

The belief in some quarters that the fight would be carried on more openly during the next congressional session was based on two factors—the number of controversial issues coming before the legislators, and the approaching off-year elections.

Administration friends have made no secret of President Roosevelt's intention to continue his fight for wage-hour legislation, blocked earlier this month by southern Democrats in the house .

While this rebellion was more along sectional lines than the senate revolt on the Roosevelt court bill, many southern Democrats were active in both.

Should an appreciable number of Democrats continue to block various administration measures, many of the president's supporters forecast he would call for a showdown in the primaries next spring and summer.

But if the president should rally sufficient strength to push his program through, some of the speculators said, the showdown might be delayed until the 1940 convention.

SINGING MOUSE HAS SINGING SON

So Maybe Minnie Will Soon Be Doing Duets.

WOODSTOCK, Ill.—(AP)—Minnie, the musical mouse, may soon be singing duets with a son.

Herbert O. Gensch, superintendent of the Chicago industrial home for children who discovered Minnie in a coal bin a year ago, disclosed today she had a son, one of 13 offsprings, who has shown some ability as a warbler.

Tomorrow will be the first anniversary of Minnie's debut on a nation-wide radio hookup. In the first year of her career, Gensch said, she earned $1,000, which was turned over to the children's home.

ORDERS PERIL U. S. CITIZENS

New Jap Regulations Order Death For Foreigners For Military Crimes.

had been ordered ready to sail up the Yangtze river Tuesday with Consults John B. Allison and James Espy to reopen the embassy, but the request may prevent the reopening.

The gunboat will leave tomorrow, regardless of the embassy question, with the salvage tug Saucy to examine the possibilities of raising the United States gunboat Panay, sunk by Japanese bombs in the Yangtze above Nanking Dec. 12.

Japan's steady spread across China, meanwhile, centered at three focal points.

In North China, Japanese forces had crossed the Yellow river between Tsinan, capital of Shantung province, and the sea. Tsinan, unconfirmed Japanese reports said, already has been captured.

On the North China coast, seven Japanese warships were reported sighted off Tsingtao, Shantung port which had been exempted until now from Japan's general coastal blockade.

It was believed the war vessels were to enforce a newly ordered blockade of Chinese vessels at Tsingtao.

The third war theater was in Chekiang province, south of Shanghai, where Japanese columns aimed at Fengwha, birthplace of China's leader, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, and Ningpo., important Hangchow bay port. The provincial capital, Hangchow, was occupied Friday.

PANAY INCIDENT 'CLOSED'

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The state department indicated today it considered a "closed incident" the international situation arising from the bombing of the gunboat Panay, although the inemnity remains to be fixed.

Officials made it plain that this government would watch closely to see Japan carries out its assurances that there would be no unlawful interference with American nationals and interests in China.

Secretary Hull, replying Saturday to Japan's promises of respect for American rights in China, said the United States considered them "responsive" to its protests and demands.

Japan's first apologies promised full reparations for the sinking of the Panay and three Standard Oil boats on the Yangtze river Dec. 12. In a second note Japan added guarantees that Americans and their property would be protected.

State department officials said the amount of indemnification would not be determined for some time. Besides the property loss resulting from the bombing, three men were killed and several wounded.

JAPAN SATISFIED

TOKYO —(AP)— Japanese government officials expressed general satisfaction today over termination of the Panay incident despite disagreement of Japan and the United States on motives of the Japanese aviators who sank the American gunboat Dec. 12.

"The United States must adhere to the findings of its naval board of inquiry," said a foreign office spokesman. "And Japan must adhere to the findings of its own investigators. Japan forever will insist it (the bombing) was a mistake.

"Japan could not do otherwise."

(And its acceptance of Japan's guarantee against further infringement on United States rights, the state department said it would rely on the findings of the American naval board of inquiry. This was taken to mean that the United States government does not admit the Japanese version that the attack was entirely unintentional.)

CAPTURES TSINAN

SHANGHAI —(AP)— The Japanese army tonight announced the complete occupation of Tsinan, capital of Shantung province and the seventh Chinese provincial capital to fall to Japanese forces.

Tsinan was the objective of one of several Japanese columns that swarmed across the Yellow river over the week-end with the evident purpose of adding all Shantung to Japan's zone of conquest.

Japanese dispatches also reported the capture of Weihsien, important junction point of the railway between Tsinan and Tsingtao, chief port of the province.

PLANE TO RUSH NEWSREEL FILM OF PANAY SINKING TO CAPITAL

NEW YORK—(AP)—A specially-chartered United Air Lines plane is scheduled to rush the first newsreel films of the bombing of the U. S. S. Panay from Alameda, Calif., to New York tomorrow—and the first unedited print will be flown to Washington, D. C. it was announced today.

Norman Alley, Universal Newsreel cameraman, who "shot" the dramatic scenes of the bombing, standing on the deck of the Little American gunboat while it was under fire, will accompany the films on the trans-continental flight.

The Associated Press Newsphoto service has obtained exclusive rights for newspaper reproduction of the films.

Universal officials said today the first showing of the graphic pictures will be made within 24 hours after their arrival in New York, probably reaching the screen late Wednesday night or Thursday morning.

"It will be a three-reel picture, about 3,000 feet and running half an hour," an official said.

Alley was described by Universal officials as a "Soldier-of-Fortune Cameraman" and one of the top men in the profession.

Originally, the films were scheduled to arrive at Alameda this morning aboard the China Clipper, from Honolulu, but Pan-American Airway officials said reports of snow in mid-Pacific and "ice and gale conditions" off the California coast caused a 24-hour postponement of the flight. The plane is now due at Alameda tomorrow morning.

DESCRIBES WAR IN FAR EAST

from them almost as accurately as shells from field guns.

Columns of men simply dissolved into fragments of torn flesh.

Houses disappeared in clouds of dust which settled over the bodies of the farm families that had been in them.

I went into Chapei—one of the principal industrial areas of the Shanghai Chinese city — which I had seen destroyed during the Chinese-Japanese hostilities of 1932.

The destruction then was almost as nothing compared to this destruction.

I went to Woosung, a sort of port subburb of Shanghai.

I saw children, women, and men die in hundreds.

Many of them were blown into pieces too widely scattered to make possible a decent burial.

Some of those who lived through the continuous series of attacks and counter-attacks were left with only stumps for limbs. Others were blinded.

I saw the development of the Chinese "scorched earth" policy.

That policy was adopted at the suggestion of leaders of the Chinese Communist party who reconciled their long quarrel with Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and were taken into the central Chinese government after the war started.

It is designed to destroy everything destroyable in the path of the enemy's advance so that he cannot live off the countryside.

I saw grain crops levelled, farm houses burned, buildings dynamited, bridges destroyed, and even footpaths gashed with great holes so that they could not be walked upon.

I went into north China.

The dikes along the rivers there were broken and the fields turned into muddy lakes dotted with mounds of rotting grain.

Tientsin was a shell of the gay city I had known a few years ago when it was my headquarters. Piles of crushed brick and pieces of broken concrete were all that was left of buildings I used to frequent.

I heard a description of war from broken Chinese soldiers who were invalided from the front. They whispered of men who were chained to their machine guns so that they could not cease firing when they were assigned to cover a retreat. They told of officers who enforced obedience with automatic pistols.

Mansfielder One Of Youngest U. S. Great-Granddads

Peter Lissekam, 59-year-old Mansfielder, makes no claims to the title as the nation's youngest great-grandfather, but he's certain his rating is better than that of the Evansville, Ind., claimant who is 62.

Lissakem, who lives on Bahl avenue, entered the great-grandfather class two months ago when his granddaughter, Mrs. Charles Hill, also of Mansfield, gave birth to a son. Hiss is employed in the News-Journal circulation department.

The child has three great-grandparents living — Mr. and Mrs. Lissakam and Mrs. Ida Johnson of Marion, who is Hill's grandmother.

Lissakam was a father at 23; his son, Peter, jr., at 16, and his grandson, Hill, at 20.

The two leading contenders for the title of youngest great-grandfather title are T. J. Barlow, Panama, Okla., who became a great-father a year ago when he was only 56, and Jerry M. Wilson, 58, of Akron.

ism when President Woodrow Wilson appointed Baker secretary of war. Army officers regarded him a pacifist and gave him a doubtful reception. But when the United States entered the war, he handled the mobilization of men and war materials with such efficiency that General James G. Harbord, a Republican, later called him "the greatest secretary of war, in war, that our history has yet produced."

Baker returned to Cleveland in 1920, once more entering private law practice. But he was drafted to head the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, and from time to time answered calls to public service.

His grave will be near those of other prominent Cleveland residents, including John D. Rockefeller and Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France.

highways, United Press reports said.

In Mansfield, Paul Shields, 26, Trimble road, suffered a fracture of his right ankle when he was knocked down by a hit-skip driver Christmas nigh at West First and Crouse streets. He was treated at General hospital.

Miss Mary J. Averill, of 34 Carpenter road, was treated at the hospital for arm injuries suffered in a collision of two automobiles at Park avenue west and Bowman streets. She was an occupant in a car driven by Mrs. R. G. Averill, her mother. The vehicle collided with an auto operated by Edward Williams of 183 Marion avenue, police said.

When two cars sideswiped Friday night on routes 42 three miles south of Lexington, Mrs. Lynn E. Welches of Dayton received arm injuries. Five other passengers of the two cars, driven by Lynn E. Welches, Dayton, and Sam Fein of Chicago, escaped injury.

Machine Overturns.

Mrs. C. P. Mapp of Bellevue, Pa., received cuts on her hands when the car in which she was riding with three other members of her family turned over along route 30 about 5 p. m. Sunday just east of Mansfield. The car, operated by Mrs. Mapp's son, Charles, 15, collided with a truck driven by C. E. Card of Alliance, according to Corp. Scott Radcliffe of the State Highway patrol.

Seven persons were hurt, none seriously, in two traffic accidents at Bucyrus and Sycamore Saturday night. Lloyd Miller and Clarence Aurand, both of Sycamore, suffered cuts about the head and face when the car in which they were riding crashed into a parked automobile at Sycamore.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Genzer of Bucyrus; J. R. Ferguson of New Washington, and Winifred Brouse and Harold McIntre of Akron were treated at Bucyrus City hospital for cuts and bruises after cars driven by Ferguson and Genzer collided on route 30 about six miles east of Bucyrus.

2 Shootings In Ohio.

Ohio's Christmas toll included Mrs. Cordelia Campbell, 55, socially prominent, Youngstown resident, who was shot to death at a Yule party. Her heiress daughter, Louise, was held in jail pending the outcome of an inquest.

A Christmas party at Toledo resulted in the accidental shooting of John Miller, 39, struck by the charge from an aimlessly fired pistol.

At Greenville, Donald Royer, 15, fell off a Christmas bicycle and was drowned in seven feet of water. Three men died at Canton in a collision of an automobile and a truck, and four Ohioans ended their own lives in Yuletide despondency.

Kentucky counted 22 dead in its check of holiday fatalities, with five persons killed in shooting affairs and a sixth stabbed to death. Alabama had 13 deaths from gunfire or stabbings in holiday brawls.

In Chicago, Thomas Burns, 32, admitted killing his father in an argument over the decoration of the family Christmas tree. Two brothers were held at International Falls, Minn., in connection with the slaying of their father as he waited to give his estranged wife a Christmas present.

Clear and cool weather over much of the eastern half of the nation was given as the cause of the huge loss of life in traffic accidents. Thousands of motorists swarmed the highways enroute to their homes or in visits to relatives over the Christmas holiday.

Thirteen persons died in two traffic crashes, one at Wellsburg, W. Va., and the other at Wilmington, N. C. Six men died in the West Virginia tragedy when an automobile plunged 75 feet into a creek. In the other crash, seven persons drowned when their car dropped from a bridge into a river.

Jailed As Purse Thief 5 Minutes After Robbery

A 26-year-old colored man was held in the city jail today for investigation in connection with a purse snatching Friday night, the fourth reported in the city within a week.

He was captured by police on Surrey road less than five minutes after Mrs. Jacob E. Maiyer, 474 Springmill street, had been robbed of her purse as she walked along Springmill at Miller street.

Police said the man, only partially identified by Mrs. Maiyer as her assailant, had in his possession the exact amount of money that the woman had in her purse when she was robbed. The empty pocketbook was found in the rear of a house on Lafayette avenue.

Mrs. Maiyer told police that while she was walking on Springmill street, a man approached her from the rear, struck her in the head, snatched her purse and ran south on Miller street. The purse contained a $5 bill, a $1 bill, a nickel and three pennies, she told police.

Police said the man denied being in the vicinity of Miller street and that he had received the money from a relative.

daughter had fired it once in the house.

Prosecutor Paul J. Regan said the inquiry indicated that "Miss Campbell had been drinking before the shooting."

Paul Z. Hodge, attorney for Miss Campbell, visited her in jail yesterday. No charges were filed against her.

Miss Campbell traveled extensively abroad with her mother and found pleasure on the large Campbell estate in riding horses and breeding dogs.

She was described by Prosecutor Regan as being "pretty well unnerved" by the events of the tragic Christmas party and her subsequent experiences in the jail.

She was taken to the jail after giving blood for her mother in a transfusion operation at a Youngstown hospital.

Visited by Relatives.

Sheriff Roy Hardman served a Christmas dinner to her in the jail and she awaited developments nervously yesterday, jailers said, as prisoners on the floor below sang hymns.

She was visited briefly by a sister of her mother, Mrs. Marie Ravelli, of England. Mrs. Ravelli and her husband, E. G. Ravelli, were visiting at the estate at the time of the shooting. Also visiting the Campbells was Mrs. Uretta Bronch, of London, a sister of Miss Campbell.

Detective Luarde went to the heavily wooded estate after the shooting. He said Miss Campbell had gone to her car. The keys were not there and she returned to the house with the gun. He said the investigation indicated the gun had been fired twice.

Relatives of Mrs. Campbell at the estate declined to discuss the occurrence. Prosecutor Regan said they would be called to the inquest.

Mrs. Campbell's husband, Louis J., former president of Electric Alloy Steel company of Erie, Pa., died in 1933. James A. Campbell, long colorful figure in Mahoning valley steel industry, died in 1935.

Assembly Spurs 'Legal Graft' Inquiry, Relief Fight

LIQUOR, ROAD DEPARTMENTS FIRST ON LIST

'Hatchet Men' to Probe State Contracts; Aid for Needy Up to Tax Committee.

COLUMBUS—(AP)— The Ohio legislature's twin-barredded fight—over a premanent relief program and a senatorial investigation of state departments—moves toward an intensive stage this week.

The "hatchet men" inquiry into reports of graft in the letting of state contracts and purchase of amterials was scheduled for early public hearings and its leaders promised speedy delving into operations of the Ohio government.

A house-approved relief program was before the senate's committee on taxation and relief with the supporters and foes of Gov. Martin L. Davey in a contradictory alliance.

Davey Plan Eliminated.

Members of the Democratic majority in the house sent to the upper chamber a series of poor relief bills that failed to include the governor's major requirement—equal matching by the local communities.

The senate majority, normally opposed to Davey's legislative a.d fiscal policies, indicated it would back the governor's program while some of the administration's regular supporters in that chamber were ready to fight the plan when committee hearings begin tomorrow.

Former Sen. James Metzenbaum of Cleveland, special counsel for the investigating committee, was reported ready to subpoena witnesses believed to have information that "considerations" had been paid to secure state contracts.

The committee was expected to give first attention to the liquor and highway departments.

Although financing of the investigation has not been arranged, members counter on senate and gubernatorial opproval of a $40,000 appropriation. Gov. Martin L. Davey vetoed a $50,000 fund for a similar inquiry last summer but said recently he was unconcerned over the current probe.

Up to Committee.

The next move toward relief was up to the senate taxation committee, reported favorable to Governor Davey's demand for matching by local governments of state funds. The house has approved a $15,000,000 plan for 1938 as a compromise between the governor's and one backed by city and county officials, which would have the state carry the major burden of indigent aid.

Neither house planned working sessions until the senate taxation committee had a chance to offer its relief views.

"Burn Me," Cries Youth After He Murders Girl, 22

NEWARK, N. J.—(U.P.)—Vincent Franco, 26, begged police to "burn" him today because he killed Antoinette Imperiale, 22, while more than a score of Sunday motorists looked on, too horrified to act. The girl had refused to marry him.

Franco struck the girl with an iron pipe and shot her twice as she sat beside him in a car. Then, as she fled, he ran her down with the car and drove it over her body again and again. Then he fired two more shots into it. By that time spectators had summoned police.

Sergeant Arthur Coakley prevented Franco from shooting himself. The girl was dead.

"Did you do this?" Coakley asked.

"You can burn me for it!" the rejected suitor cried. "I did it. I killed her because I loved her and she wouldn't marry me."

Up and Down THE STREET

The state highway department is all set to battle drifting snows in Richland county again. Orange picket fences, designed to prevent snow from drifting across the main highways, add color to the roadsides. The routes crossing the county from north to south have been given the most attention, with the four-foot fences constructed several feet to the west of the roads in places where drifting is encouraged by the topography.

Persons seeking Police Chief Meade K. Bates at the city building shouldn't have the least bit of trouble finding his office in the future. On the door is a large plaque with the words: "Office of the Chief of Police." It was a Christmas present to Bates from Detective Harry Copper and Lee Remy.

Photographers who go in for colored pictures and looking for subjects would probably be interested in a Mansfield bowling league. The circuit—the Commercial B league—is by far the most colorful in the city. Roy Vaughn, its secretary, contends. There are 12 teams in the league and each one has different colored shirts. "You couldn't find any more colors on a Christmas tree," Vaughn says.

Richard Olin, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Olin, 135 Brinkerhoff avenue, and a student at Kenyon college, didn't have a chance to spend Christmas with his parents this year, but he is not being deprived of holiday festivities. The former Mansfield high school athlete is a member of the Kenyon college swimming team, which is in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., staging a series of exhibitions for an acquatic forum being conducted there. Olin will absorb Florida sunshine until after the first of the year.

A hospital may not be the best place in the world to spend Christmas, but a Christmas tree sort of helps. So hospital attaches put one up on the first floor, and decorated it. Patients on the road to recovery were able to see it, and thus the day was a little brighter.

BUREAU BACKS 'GRAFT' PROBE

Farm Organization Urging Support For Inquiry In Ohio Road Department.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The Ohio farm bureau today expressed the hope that the Ohio senate investigation of alleged legal graft would result in "removal of the highway business of our state from the damaging influence of politicians and grafters."

In a statement issued by Edwin J. Bath, legislative representative, the farm organization urged that "every citizen" inform his representatives and senators that the public demands the inquiry be given proper support and adequate time to complete the investigation.

"If there is collusion between the highway department, material interests and road-builders; if we build roads of many types or just any type just to furnish the material interests with business; if certain contractors are bought off by other contractors; if roads are not up to the standard for which the contracts call; in the name of common decency let us expose it and take the proper steps for correction," the statement said.

According to reports, the highway and liquor departments are to be the first to be investigated by the "hatchetmen" committee.

Former State Senator James Metzenbaum, Cleveland, legal counsel for the committee, was expected to return here today to arrange for beginning of formal hearings.

PROPOSES TO EXCLUDE SMALL CORPORATION FROM PROFIT TAX

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Members of a house subcommittee said today they had decided to divide corporations into three tax groups, according to the size of their incomes.

The plan, they said, probably would not involve increasing a proposed income tax on corporations showing profits of between $20,000 and $25,000. It would exempt additional firms from the widely-criticized undistributed profits tax.

Groups proposed.

1. Corporations with incomes of $25,000 or less would pay a normal income tax, probably of 12½, 14 and 16 per cent, and no undistributed profits tax.

2. Companies with large incomes would pay an undistributed profits tax of 16 to 20 per cent.

3. Firms with medium-sized incomes, ranging up from $25,000, would be placed in what subcommitteemen termed a "notch." Their taxes would be lower than the 16 to 20 per cent undistributed profits tax of the big corporations but somewhat higher than the levies of firms paying only the normal income tax.

Thus these intermediate corporations also would be exempt from the undistributed profits tax.

By taxing corporations in three categories, legislators said, provision can be made for a gradual increase, instead of an abrupt jump, in the tax rate.

The details of the method of treating these corporations have not been worked out, subcommitteemen said.

ASKS INQUIRY

Lawmaker Wants Congress to Probe Monopoly Practices.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Carl A. Hatch, D., N. M., today called for a congressional investigation of alleged monopolistic practices of big business as outlined in a radio address last night by Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson.

Hatch said he believed it would be proper for the special senate committee investigating unemployment and relief to include in its survey a study of Jackson's charges.

Hatch is a member of the committee, which will begin public hearings Jan. 4, one day after congress convenes in regular session.

FREE CHILD AS ARMED CITIZENS PURSUE AUTOS

Abductors Demand $3,800 In Kidnaping But Posse Breaks Up Plans for Flight.

CENTERVILLE, Ind. —(U.P.)— State police and special deputies pressed their search today for two men who kidnaped three-year-old John Bryan Christmas eve, then released him unharmed when hampered by close pursuit of irate citizens.

The car which the men used in their flight, was found last night on a lonely road near Newcastle, Ind., 40 miles west of Centerville.

The boy, son of John L. Bryan, moderately wealthy cashier of the Centerville State bank, was kidnaped for $3,800 ransom. No money was paid, however.

Phones Mother.

When the abduction occurred Mrs Bryan was visiting her husband. The men entered the home and forced the child's 17-year-old nurse Norma Schroy, to telephone Mrs. Bryan and tell her to return home. Then one of the men fled with Miss Schroy and the baby. When Mrs. Bryan returned the remaining gunman ordered her to call her husband and say:

"Bring home $3,800 quickly or you'll never see your son again."

Instead of obeying, Bryan ran to the street and summoned passersby and employes of nearby stores. They hurried to the home, arriving as the remaining desperado sped away in the Bryan auto with Mrs. Bryan and Julian Dunbar, a grocer who went to the home in his truck.

Mrs. Bryan and Dunbar were released 10 miles northwest of the city. The baby and nurse were pushed out of the other gunman's car near a farm home after they had been held captive for more than two hours.

Kidnaper Worried.

"The kidnaper said he had no plan to keep us prisoners for a long time," Miss Schroy said. "He was worried because the other man didn't appear. So he said he would have to let us go."

The two were driven home by a farmer.

Officers believed the kidnapers met Saturday near Newcastle, abandoned the Bryan car—the one recovered—and drove off in their own machine

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

The Way to Peace.

EVENTS OF the last few days are such as to convince usually well-informed men in Washington that behind the scenes an effective, though unofficial, understanding already has been arrived at between the United States and Great Britain which will insure the co-operation of the fleets of the two nations in dealing with Japan in the Far East.

SUCH an understanding, while not formally admitted, it is pointed out, is as inevitable as it is essential. Not to have it would be supremely unintelligent upon the part of both countries. It may or it may not eventuate in overt action. That depends upon developments, but its existence is indispensable. There is no other way in which either nation really can protect its interests or safeguard against repetition of the outrageous incidents from which both have suffered and for which Japan offers profuse apologies and regrets—but repeats. The eagerness of the British for this course has been made apparent in various ways, and certainly Mr. Roosevelt's recent declaration in favor of co-operation lends substance to the idea. With whom can we co-operate except the British?

ALREADY both the British and our own fleets are in position for the quickest possible shift to the Orient and in certain informed quarters there is an expectation that before many weeks have passed there will be found in Chinese waters a concentration of British and American war vessels, using Singapore as a supply base, of such proportions as to be overwhelming so far as Japan is concerned—able to crush her if forced. It is known that action along this line has been seriously considered by the president, and it is known that his naval advisers strongly favor it; that Mr. Roosevelt inclines that way.

THE ARGUMENTS are clear. For example, it is contended that the overpowering force which complete British-American naval co-operation could muster would be such as to make it unnecessary to fire a shot, but it would effectually halt Japan and compel her to accept dictation. It is pointed out, further, that the president would need no authorization from congress to send our fleet to the East. While such a move unquestionably would bring howls of protest from the kind of people who support the Ludlow war referendum resolution, he would be supported by the bulk of the country, certainly by the bulk of the press.

THOSE who urge active British-American naval co-operation to end the Chino-Japanese conflict are convinced that this will not promote war, but peace—and not only peace in the Orient but peace throughout the world. If, through a formidable assembly of naval strength, it can be made plain to Japan that this country and Great Britain are determined to put an end to her aggressions against China, protect their own interests and no longer accept apologies for such things as the Panay affair—it will have a very calming effect upon the aggressor nations of Europe, go a long way to avert war on that continent.

IN OTHER WORDS, there is a firm conviction in the minds of men whose judgment ought to be soundest—and this includes some of the leading diplomats in Washington—that nothing could be better for world peace than a joint demonstration against Japan by the British and American navies, backed up by the French. Once show to the world that the three great democracies are determined and prepared to fight together and there will be no war, because no other combination could stand against them. Financially and in armed power, their superiority would be too great to cope with. The president never said a sounder thing than when, in reply to Mr. Landon's telegram, he expressed himself as against isolation and for co-operation. Co-operation means, of course, with Great Britain and France. It can't mean anything else. There is a feeling that soon after congress convenes next week a message on co-operation in the foreign field may come from the White House. It is a subject upon which the president has been concentrating for days and upon which he is reported as feeling deeply. So does Secretary of State Hull.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Operatic Helen Jepson's introduction to movie work was typically filled with annoyances. Miss Jepson, slim and comely, and Charles Kullman, also from the Met, were principals in the first and only scene of the first day of "Goldwyn Follies."

They were doing a scene from "La Traviata"—doing it over and over. The setting was beautiful, like Miss Jepson, whose dark blue evening gown was the most vivid spot of color on the stage. The other women and the background players all wore pastel shades, making it easier for the color camera to pick out the star.

Kullman and Miss Jepson were singing with full orchestra. But things went wrong at least 10 times while I watched and listened, and the two singers would start anew. The lights went on and off time and again, being "saved" during waits But neither Miss Jepson nor Kullman acted like an opera star. Both smiled, sat, and sang on order. For all I know they're still there, still meeting the thousand and one technical obstacles of movie-making—but at least Goldwyn's $2,000,000 extravaganza has been launched.

* * *

Every picture about Annapolis has that scene wherein the upperclassmen twit the freshman and make him go through farcial antics for their amusement. "Hold 'Em, Navy!" is no exception. We find John Howard giving elaborately serious commands to Lew Ayres, the freshman. The result will be Ayers' forced demonstration, with roly-poly Benny Baker as victim, of how a gentleman kisses a lady.

DIES IN AKRON

Mrs. Young Was Once Church Organist Here.

Mrs. Blanche L. Young, 79, a former organist of the First Presbyterian church, died at her home in Akron today, an Associated Press dispatch revealed. Mrs. Young, who was active in church work while residing here, left Mansfield about 25 years ago.

She was the widow of Alexander Maxwell Young, who, with a brother, Hugh, operated a dry goods store on Walnut street near Third street for many years.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday in Akron, with burial in Bellville cemetery.

PLAN WEDDING IN HOSPITAL

Couple Hurries to Cleveland; Maid of Honor Stricken.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Miss Beth Campbell of Oklahoma City, Okla., and Joseph H. Short, jr., of Vicksburg, Mass., planned a hospital wedding today so the bride-elect's sister, Miss Flora Campbell, would not miss her role—that of maid of honor.

Flora will be absent tonight from her role of leading lady in the New York production "Many Mansions."

She was stricken with appendicitis while en route from New York to Toledo where her sister's wedding was scheduled for last night.

Short and his bride-elect said they would be married tonight in the actress' hospital room if hospital officials decide the patient's condition would permit.

Youth Weary Of Living Seeks Help

By VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am a boy 17 years old. I am working and am making good money, but it seems just can't get interested in life. I pray every night to God to take me off the earth, and sometimes I think of killing myself. I would if it would be fair to my mother.

"I go out with girls and other boys, but then I break away from them and won't go out any more. The only pal I ever loved is dead. He died trying to save my life. I often think of him and wish I could see him, but I never do, so I guess there is only one way to see him, and that is by killing myself.

"The reason I wrote to you is I often read your piece in the paper, so I thought you could help me.

"WEARY."

I am glad you did write to me, Weary. Do it again. You say your best pal died trying to save your life. Of course you must miss him will everything. Life always seems a bit useless after a good friend has gone. It is hard to reconcile onself to it. I know. I, too, have lost good pals whom I loved, but somehow one has to go on and even to keep cheerful.

This friend saved your life, you say, and this naturally makes you feel even worse about his loss. But as he DID save your life, why not try to make it worth something to prove to him that his act was not in vain? He was a brave chap, and I am sure he would not want to think that his friend could not face life and be courageous about it, would he? He would probably like to think of you as growing into a strong, cheerful man, doing a good job of living. Why don't you try hard to do this instead of thinking of taking your life?

And it would be a rotten thing to do to your mother—killing yourself. A psychologist I know of says that a person who wants to take his own life really does it to spite someone. He hates someone and wants to get even. You don't hate anyone, do you, my boy? As you are working and earning good money, why don't you look up someone who is more unfortunate than yourself, and do them a good turn? It doesn't matter who it is—old or young, rich or poor—there are people who are lonely and hungry and very unhappy. Life would seem more worth living if you could do some good. It is the self-absorbed person who commits suicide. Write me again soon.

In order to get hyacinth bulbs to flower satisfactorily, it is necessary that they should make a fair number of roots before they begin to make top growth, and for this reason it is usual to keep the bulbs in the dark for a few weeks after potting them or placing them in glasses, as the case may be. Darkness is not wholly essential, although coolness certainly is. If the two conditions can be combined, it seems to have a very much better effect.

I don't know how you other housewives feel, but I like cold roast meats, and my family does too. Instead of trying to warm the roast over in some way, I usually serve it cold for a meal or two. There was a time not so long ago—and maybe it is still the fashion in some households—of serving the meat hot at the noon meal and cold for supper with hashed brown, fried, creamed or other warmed over potatoes. Meat is high in price these days, and we have been pretty well trained by dietitians to think it should only be served once a day, so I, for one, seldom have it on the table oftener than for dinner, and I think this is generally true, whether dinner is served at noon or night. I am using two very good recipes that use evaporated milk instead of fresh. You can always substitute the fresh if you prefer.

Dull Hair Makes Girls Seek Help

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty"

OVER IN LONDON, I'm told, women now are wearing wigs that duplicate their own coiffures when they have not the time to curl their locks into the ringlets that fashion demands at present. And I must admit that the idea really has its points!

Of course, the average woman doesn't wear a wig except at masquerades or if she's had the misfortune to lose all her hair. Ordinarily, she much prefers cultivating and exposing the hair that nature endowed her with. But according to my recent mail, some girls really would like to hide their own locks beneath a wig, and that's because their own tresses are unattractive.

What most of these girls complain about is that their hair seems so dull, so lacking in gloss and sheen. And they have every right to feel upset about their locks For hair, to be beautiful, must be soft, shining and lustrous

Several Ways of Applying.

Anyone whose locks are dry and dull should administer hot oil treatments, and proper brushing and massaging, until the condition is corrected. These steps in correcting dull, dry, brittle hair are very simple to execute, and any normally intelligent woman can administer them herself.

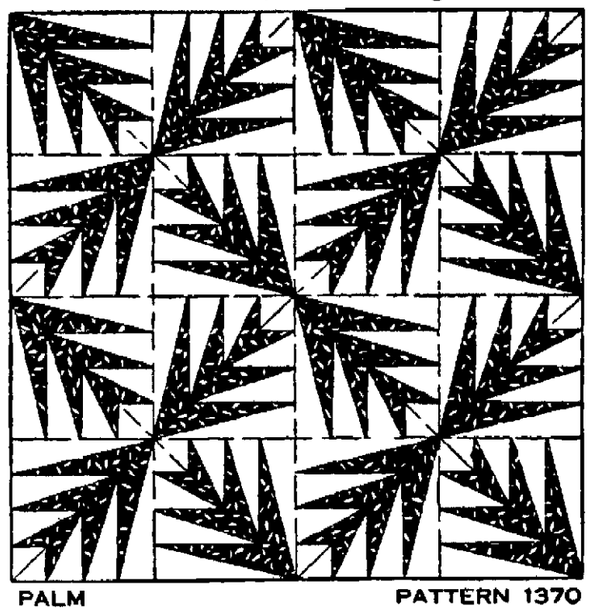
However, until the dullness is corrected through such reconditioning treatments, a woman whose locks appear brittle and dull can give her hair luster through the use of a good, marketed brilliantine. But she must employ skill when using such a preparation, if she wishes it to enhance the loveliness of her tresses.

There are several satisfactory ways of applying brilliantine in order to lend the hair luster. A very fine atomizer, for instance, is ideal for the purpose. The lubricant should be only very lightly sprayed onto the hair. Then the hair should be brushed briskly, in order to distribute the preparation evenly and to remove any possible excess. In this way, the hair will be given an attractive luster and the scalp will also receive a bit of nourishment. And goodness knows, the dry scalp needs plenty of that'

There's another way, too, of applying brilliantine to give gloss and luster to dull, dry hair. In this method, place a tiny bit of the preparation in the palm of your hand, and sweep your hairbrush over it. Remove any excess of the brilliantine from the brush and then lightly brush your hair with it. Always brush the ends of your hair first. The ends are usually the dryest part of the hair and can stand more of the lubricant than that nearer the scalp.

After the ends have been brushed, smooth the brush over your entire head of hair carefully and lightly. The one precaution you must observe is that you use just a slight bit of brilliantine, and avoid using any excess. Used in this manner the brilliantine will help to keep your tresses smoothly in place, will add gloss and sheen to your hair, and will greatly enhance its lustrous loveliness.

PALM BLOCK FOR QUILT



PALM PATTERN 1370

By LAURA WHEELER

Palms! What stateliness they call to mind, and what a beautiful quilt they've inspired! Loveliest in green against a light ground, other colors would also be effective. Mainly triangles, the simple patches join to form a 7½ inch block, one you'll find amazingly easy to piece. Pattern 1370 contains complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I THINK Philip Veritben's vanity would have been distinctly dented if he could have witnessed our reactions to his telephone message.

All of us had been genuinely anxious for his safety when we were waiting for news of the plane he had engaged to come in search of Noel. But once assured that he had escaped unhurt after the plane's forced landing, we gave but a passing perfunctory thought to his plight, temporarily stranded in the tiny New Hampshire hamlet, but reveled instead in his declaration that he meant to go directly back to his hotel, and that he did not wish Noel to return by train, but to wait until the wrecked clutch of his motor car could be repaired.

I knew that Mary's joyous cry of relief as she nestled in her husband's arms was echoed in Dicky's heart as well as mine, and I was not surprised to hear him say with brusque tenderness: "Now, you see you haven't a worry left in the world for the next 30 hours or so. Come, Madge, let's leave the lower farmhouse world to these incurable romanticists. I'm dead sleepy, and I know you must be."

Noel, Mary Grateful.

I rose with him, but we did not get away so easily, for Noel and Mary were upon us with grateful voices sounding in our ears, and hands which threatened to leave our muscles aching with the fervor of their grip.

"We'll never forget this, never" Noel assured us with tremulous voice, and Dicky gave him a reproving little slap on the back.

"Don't take time out for thanks," he adjured them, and then, with his hand under my arm, he hurried me out of the room, where he switched on the lights, and seated me in my easiest chair, pulling up another opposite me, and settling himself comfortably in it.

"You're not so tired as I pretended, are you?" he asked, and I knew that he wanted to talk. I was extremely fatigued, but I rallied my faculties, and "played up."

Peace at Last.

"No, indeed," I said "I am quite wide awake. But I was glad to pretend with you. Those youngsters need a little peace and quiet after all this."

"Well!" Dicky drawled, "peace and quiet are going to be what they are going to have nothing else but, thanks to you and your genius for scheming—and heavenly inspired fibbing."

He smiled lazily at me, and I smiled back, content with the world.

"D'ye mind my pipe?" he asked.

"Of course not, silly," I answered, and pulling out his favorite disreputable brier, he leaned back, to all outward appearances a man who had not a worry in the world.

But I have conjugated his moods and tenses for too many years to trust to appearances. A voice deep in my consciousness warned me that there was a disturbing undercurrent beneath the apparently placid flow of his thoughts as mirrored in his smiling face. And at last there came a question which I had vaguely expected.

Madge Suspicious.

"When are you and Mary going to move into her new apartment?" he asked with apparent casualness.

"In about a week, I think," I told him, while my brain wakened to sudden wariness.

"Why the delay? Isn't it ready?"

"I believe it is to be completed—the furnishings I mean—day after tomorrow, or at least that is what Mr. Veritzen intimated. He is giving Mary a very luxurious setting, you know."

"Yes, I know." The reply was perfunctory, but his next words held a ring of interest in them.

"Why the delay?" he asked. "Why don't you go into the city as soon as the apartment is finished?"

To Refinish Furniture.

Remove all old varnish from furniture before trying to revarnish it. A cup of sal soda to two quarts of hot water will help. Scrub each piece with a stiff brush Wear rubber gloves to protect your hands.

Mulching a strawberry bed for the winter has been found very profitable. It protects plants from freezing damage and conserves moisture during the fruiting season. Now is the time to apply mulch as the ground is somewhat frozen. A bale of straw makes an excellent mulch.

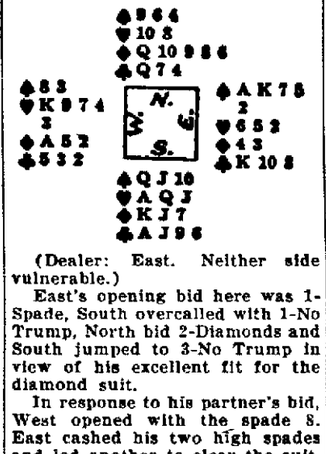
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT A SINGLETON LEAD

A good partner seldom will open your suit against the opponent's no trump game if he has just a singleton in it. Counting him, therefore, for two cards, can give you a reading on the declarer which will enable you to let a round of the suit go by, so that you can bring it in later when your partner is back in the lead.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East's opening bid here was 1-Spade, South overcalled with 1-No Trump, North bid 2-Diamonds and South jumped to 3-No Trump in view of his excellent fit for the diamond suit.

In response to his partner's bid, West opened with the spade 8. East cashed his two high spades and led another to clear the suit. The declarer then went after diamonds and was agreeably surprised to find the diamond A with West. West having no more spades, it did not matter which suit he elected to return, as South's contract was safe.

Quite a different situation would have resulted had East allowed the declarer to win the first spade trick. For his no trump bids, South surely held three cards of the suit, which would leave West with two at the most. It was therefore up to East to allow West to retain one of these to return, in case he was able to gain control of the lead. Had East held the diamond A, there would have been some justification for clearing the spade suit at once, but as his chances of getting into the lead were slim, ducking the first round was his correct play.

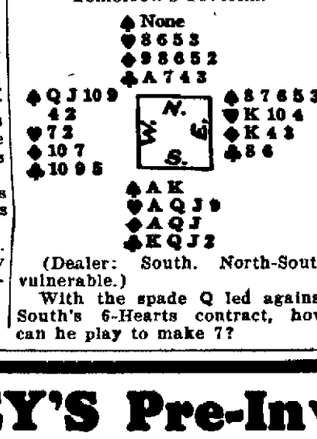
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

With the spade Q led against South's 6-Hearts contract, how can he play to make 7?

Greetings For Christmas Informal

By EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: Is there one correct way of having Christmas cards marked so they can be sent to acquaintances as well as most intimate friends? On first thought, first names seem too informal on cards sent to people who know us only as Mr. and Mrs. But I've been wondering if this would not be permissible by the same reasoning that even to strangers one doesn't sign a name with title?

Answer: If you are sending gay informal cards that are printed in the sort of printing that imitates letters made quickly by hand they could be worded "from the Jim Browns." These could not be sent to acquaintances—particularly business acquaintances—with whom you are on really formal terms, but they would be suitable for all cards sent to friends—even not intimate ones. On the other hand, a card signed "Sally and Jim" could go only to friends who call you by these names.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you give us your opinion of the following complication: John Henry Jones died many years ago, but his son John Henry Jones, Jr., had by that time made quite a name for himself professionally and did not want to discard the junior designation. Now John Henry Jones, Jr., is hoping that their first-born will be a son, and if it is, the child will be given his father's name. Actually the baby will be Junior, but under such circumstances he can't very well be given the same suffix. Will you explain what is to be done.

Answer: Legally, and therefore correctly, John Henry Jones Junior becomes John Henry Jones upon the death of his father. It is true that occasional men have found themselves in circumstances which have made it difficult—sometimes really impractical—to omit the name Junior, except on legal papers which requires their signature without suffix. If a man chooses to call himself Junior socially and disregard convention he can—and he can continue to have the name on his office door to read Junior.

But before deciding to call his child John Jones 3rd he would do well to realize that this will mean endless confusion throughout the boy's whole life. First of all, he'll be called third, which he isn't, then if he outlives his father, he'll have to jump from third to no suffix at all. One suggestion which might be useful would be for your husband to begin to make his letterhead John Henry Jones and then in paranthesis in very small type underneath, formerly John Henry Jones Junior. In this way he would gradually eliminate the handicap of having to change his name.

Marshmallow and jelly bean boys, stocking cookies and gingerbread men are children's favorites. They can be fashioned from cooky dough and decorated with cloves, strips of frosting and bits of raisins.

Name cards can be made from square or round cookies. When baking "write" the names on with melted chocolate or frosting, using a wood pick.
